Reasons for Carter donation unclear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most politicians associate themselves with pleasant things, but Jimmy Carter is identifying himself more and more with a singular unpleasantness. Taxes.

That might not be good politics, even if Carter's effort is to ease the tax burden or to show that his own dealings with the Internal Revenue Service are above suspicion. The effort is particularly likely to be politically harmful if it's confusing.

After all, is it easy to understand someone who pays the Internal Revenue Service a penny more than he owes? Let alone $6,000?

Carter's gesture Friday was, of course, to make a point. Despite a 1976 gross income of $55,000, Carter's federal income tax forms showed he owed no tax because he had taken advantage of an investment tax credit that reduced his tax liability from $11,675 to zero.

But the President said he was donating $6,000 to the IRS, anyway.

But what exactly is the point? Is the $6,000 conscience money?

"No, I don't think so," says White House Press Secretary Jody Powell. But then he adds: "People who reap substantial benefits from this country ought to pay something back, even when the law does not require it in a particular case."

Carter himself said by way of explaining his $6,000 donation that he had a "strong feeling that a person should pay some tax on his income."

Does that mean Carter wants to revise the tax laws so that everyone with income must pay a tax?

No, again. Just people with "substantial income," Powell says.

Then is it safe to say Carter's discovery about what people like himself can do to escape taxes will give impetus to his tax reform effort?

No, again. "It probably shouldn't," Powell says, "except to draw attention to taxes generally." Powell says the President will not make tax reform decisions based on his own return.

The $6.000 Carter donated to the IRS in lieu of taxes is only "indicative of the President's general approach," Powell says.

To be more specific might give businessmen the notion that Carter might try to eliminate or curtail the investment tax credit.

That might turn off business plans to lay out money for jobproducing plants and equipment. Besides, Powell says, Carter's tax revision program is still too far from completion for anyone to conclude anything about what its specific shape will be.

And so it ends in the same vagueness and confusion that has characterized many of Carter's attempts to deal with taxes.

During the primaries, Carter seemed to suggest eliminating the deduction homeowners are allowed for their mortgage interest. A Carter opponent, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, accused him of advocating an irresponsible change.

"A gross distortion," Carter shot back. He said he would do nothing to shift the tax burden to homeowners, particularly those with lower incomes. But then Carter also said "I will consider" proposing elimination of the mortgage interest deduction as part of a broader plan to lower rates.

Then, in a campaign interview, candidate Carter urged a tax overhaul "to shift a substantial increase toward those who have the higher incomes" and reduce levies on lower-andmiddle income taxpayers.

Asked what was "higher" Carter said: "I don't know. I would take the mean or median level of income and anything above that would be higher and anything below that would be lower."

A reporter then pointed out that the "median family income today is somewhere around $12,000. Somebody earning $15,000 a year is not what people commonly think of as rich ..."

Carter interjected: "I understand. I can't answer that question because I haven't gone into it."

Republicans claimed Carter had advocated increasing the taxes of half the American people.

That, said Powell, was a typical Republican distortion.

Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief adviser on issues, later said that increases would apply to the wealthy, and certainly not to people earning $12,000 or $15,000 a year. But he said it would take further study to determine the level of income at which taxes would go up.

That level still hasn't been established.

Carter said Wednesday he expects to have his tax reform package complete before the year is out. But he said that so far all he has is "a series of options."

Recently, Carter has gotten entangled in other tax issues, national and personal, each touched by contradiction or confusion.

There was the $50 rebate, part of his economic stimulus package. Carter pledged a mighty fight to pass it. Not long afterward, he declared the economy no longer needed the rebate — and he scrapped it.

Then there was his own tax audit. Early on the day it was learned that the IRS was auditing Carter's 1975 tax return, aides said the audit had in effect been invited by Carter's accountant.

Later in the day they said they couldn't agree among themselves whether it was a Carter associate or an IRS representative who initiated the audit.

Then there was the matter of when he filed his 1976 income tax return. Carter himself told reporters he had filed his 1976 return after an initial deadline extension from the IRS.

But then Powell said no, it hadn't been filed, that Carter had been mistaken. Someone, Powell said, perhaps Mrs. Carter, had taken advantage of another extension to hold the return for further review.

That someone turned out to be White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz.

Whatever frustrations to understanding these confusions present, when the 1976 return was finally filed and Carter's $6,000 donation to Uncle Sam was disclosed, one thing became abundantly clear.

Regardless of what point the $6,000 makes about Carter's notions of tax reform, he wants to make the point emphatically.

Six thousand dollars is a pot of money to someone once described by his press secretary as "tight as a tick."

New fire engine will replace aging pumper

Sikeston is going to replace one of its aging Mack fire trucks with a new Pierce pumper, although that will mean the purchase of a street sweeper will have to be delayed for another yar.

That was the decision of the City Council Friday after being told the city needs a new pumper and that a new and a used pumper were available for immediate purchase.

The council had to perform a budget-juggling act in order to find the money to pay for the truck.

City Manager Charles Church told the council that a used American-LaFrance pumper was available for $44,000 and the new Pierce was available for $46,000. The Council followed Church's recommendation and chose the Pierce.

The new truck will replace one of the Mack fire trucks currently housed in the fire station on West Malone Avenue.

The Mack trucks are old, one was purchased in 1956 and the other in 1958, and require considerable maintenance to keep in running condition.

Church said that during a recent fire one of the Mack's had to be idled back so public safety officers could add six quarts of oil to keep it pumping.

Spare parts are sometimes difficult to obtain and some have had to be specially made for the trucks, Church said.

The new pumper is a demonstration model currently located in Little Rock, Ar., and the manufacturer will bring it to Sikeston for inspection and trials before the city buys it.

The truck will come with basic equipment, but the city will have to add an additional 1,200 feet of hose, a radio and exhaust fan before the truck can be used.

Like all fire trucks, the Pierce will have a 20 year fire insurance rating. The used American-LaFrance is seven-years-old and would have only 13 years of fire rating left.

The city will pay for the pumper with $20,000 in funds that had been set aside for the purchase of a pump in the future, and the $8,000 recently given to the city by the Jaycees.

Where the remaining $18,000 would come from sparked a debate among council members. Church had recommended Sikeston borrow the money from Pierce at 7.5 per per cent interest.

Under his plan, the city would have paid $28,000 in July and another $18,120 in December. The interest on the loan amounted to $680.

Councilman Steve Sikes suggested instead borrowing the money from the general fund in the budget and saving the $680. The council went along with Sikes' plan.

In order to pay for the new truck, the money will have to come out of the funds set aside for a new street sweeper.

Both plans were designed to help the city get through a cash flow deficiency expected in September and October. The cash flow problems will result becasuse the city does not have enough money to buy both the fire truck and the street sweeper.

Under Church's plan, they would have borrowed the money from Pierce until December, thereby ensuring enough money for cash flow in the fall.

Under Sikes' plan, the city will borrow any money needed for cash flow from First National Bank. The bank is the city depositor and under the agreement, the city can borrow money interest-free.

The City will probably keep the old Mack truck being replacedand use it as a backup pumper. Church said before the meeting that the old truck was worth only about $2,000 as a trade-in.

The council will vote on the final approval at the July Council meeting.

In other action, Pete Oliver, owner of Sikeston Cut Rate Liquors, 925 S. Main St., complained to the council that the city's merchant license fee scale was discriminatory to small businesses.

He said the fee scale is 50 cents per $1,000 in gross sales up to a maximum of $800. He said there are some businesses doing $4 million a year in sales and they pay a much smaller amount proportional to gross sales than do smaller businesses.

The council promised to look into the matter.

The council set two liquor license requests for public hearing at the July 5 meeting.

Requests were presented by La Pasada Restaurant for a resort liquor-by-the-drink license and Alvin Pack is requesting a five per cent package beer license for E-Z Food Mart.

A Birmingham, Ala. woman and a rural Millersville youth were killed, one person received critical injuries,two serious and one moderate in three separate accidents on Southeast Missouri highways late Friday and Saturday.

The fatalities brought the total number of deaths in the SeMo area to 43 compared to 54 at this time last year.

John Terry Limbaugh, 19, of Millersville, was killed at 5:15 p.m. Saturday on Highway 72, 12 miles north of Jackson.

According to highway patrol, Limbaugh was east bound on a rain-slick road and entered a curve on the wrong side of the road in the path of a pickup truck driven by Charlotte Abernathy, 44, of Sedgewickville and a car driven by Ned Doza, 37, of Jackson. Both drivers attempted to swerve to avoid Limbaugh, but the youth was struck by the pickup.

A Birmingham woman, Carol Grant Wilson, 33, died at 8 a.m. Saturday at St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau following an accident that left three other passengers with critical and serious injuries.

Suspect eludes searchers in rugged country

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — They think he's still out there, wandering the densely wooded limestone foothills of the Ozarks. The posse doggedly hunts the man accused of sexually assaulting and killing three Girl Scouts nearly two weeks ago.

Saturday morning, about 150 lawmen and a handful of volunteer citizens continued their search for Gene Leroy Hart, an escaped convict who has been charged in the deaths. Officers have said Hart is a native of the area and is a crafty and cunning backwoodsman.

On Friday, about 400 persons — including the father of one of the victims — helped in the search. But most of them were sent home later because authorities said inexperienced hunters were hindering professional efforts to find clues that might lead to Hart.

Police have advised residents of the farms, ranches and homes to stay in their houses and keep the doors locked. Many are frightened.,

"If they don't catch him, what's he going to do next?" wondered one housewife in this northeastern Oklahoma area. "What do we do next? Where do we go from here? We can't just hibernate.

And, from the locked security of her nearby home, Mrs. Jim English said:

"You feel more conscious of this thing at night. At night you don't know what's coming through the woods."

The manhunt is in a 10-square-mile area about three miles from the Girl Scout camp where, with his footsteps muffled by a thunderstorm, the killer struck on June 13.

On Thursday, three counts of first-degree murder were filed against the convicted rapist who escaped nearly four years ago from the Mayes County jail at nearby Pryor.

More than half an inch of rain fell late Friday, washing out old tracks but also helping by making new ones more visible.

Temperatures rising toward 90 and humidity above 80 per cent made the tick-infested woods a steambath for the searchers and those standing by at Camp Scott, where the girls were slain.

About 50 patrol troopers, along with State Bureau of Investigation and FBI agents awaited developments at the camp, ready to move in with tracking dogs and aircraft should any sightings be reported.

And on Saturday, the state police sent in special teams of khaki-clad troopers armed with rifles.

Hart, 33, was linked to the case through two tattered photographs found near the death scene, an annual retreat for hundreds of Oklahoma Girl Scouts.

"You don't know what to do. There's nothing really you can do ... But we keep our pistols on the bar all day and a shotgun by the bed all night," said Mrs. Wayne McCartney.

Not far away, at the R. L. Stamper quarterhorse ranch, Randy Stamper said several families gathered in his father's house and kept an armed radio vigil deep into the night.

"There are a lot of people sitting up at night listening to their CB radios. They've got their doors locked and their guns loaded. The women are afraid to go into the yards by themselves."

Said one woman, "Please don't identify me. They haven't apprehended this fellow yet. He's still here with us, unfortunately. And the thing about it is, he's been with us a good long while and he may stay with us

Reasons for Carter donation unclear

Suspect eludes searchers in rugged country

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — They think he's still out there, wandering the densely wooded limestone foothills of the Ozarks. The posse doggedly hunts the man accused of sexually assaulting and killing three Girl Scouts nearly two weeks ago.

Saturday morning, about 150 lawmen and a handful of volunteer citizens continued their search for Gene Leroy Hart, an escaped convict who has been charged in the deaths. Officers have said Hart is a native of the area and is a crafty and cunning backwoodsman.

On Friday, about 400 persons — including the father of one of the victims — helped in the search. But most of them were sent home later because authorities said inexperienced hunters were hindering professional efforts to find clues that might lead to Hart.

Police have advised residents of the farms, ranches and homes to stay in their houses and keep the doors locked. Many are frightened.,

"If they don't catch him, what's he going to do next?" wondered one housewife in this northeastern Oklahoma area. "What do we do next? Where do we go from here? We can't just hibernate.

And, from the locked security of her nearby home, Mrs. Jim English said:

"You feel more conscious of this thing at night. At night you don't know what's coming through the woods."

The manhunt is in a 10-square-mile area about three miles from the Girl Scout camp where, with his footsteps muffled by a thunderstorm, the killer struck on June 13.

On Thursday, three counts of first-degree murder were filed against the convicted rapist who escaped nearly four years ago from the Mayes County jail at nearby Pryor.

More than half an inch of rain fell late Friday, washing out old tracks but also helping by making new ones more visible.

Temperatures rising toward 90 and humidity above 80 per cent made the tick-infested woods a steambath for the searchers and those standing by at Camp Scott, where the girls were slain.

About 50 patrol troopers, along with State Bureau of Investigation and FBI agents awaited developments at the camp, ready to move in with tracking dogs and aircraft should any sightings be reported.

And on Saturday, the state police sent in special teams of khaki-clad troopers armed with rifles.

Hart, 33, was linked to the case through two tattered photographs found near the death scene, an annual retreat for hundreds of Oklahoma Girl Scouts.

"You don't know what to do. There's nothing really you can do ... But we keep our pistols on the bar all day and a shotgun by the bed all night," said Mrs. Wayne McCartney.

Not far away, at the R. L. Stamper quarterhorse ranch, Randy Stamper said several families gathered in his father's house and kept an armed radio vigil deep into the night.

"There are a lot of people sitting up at night listening to their CB radios. They've got their doors locked and their guns loaded. The women are afraid to go into the yards by themselves."

Said one woman, "Please don't identify me. They haven't apprehended this fellow yet. He's still here with us, unfortunately. And the thing about it is, he's been with us a good long while and he may stay with us

Today's news in brief

More doctors named to list

WASHINGTON (AP) — A revised list of doctors doing $100,000 or more in Medicare business a year will include 214 who asked that their names be omitted, says HEW Secretary Joseph Califano Jr.

"We will not let a doctor decide if he wants to be listed," Califano told a news briefing.

"The taxpayers of this country have a right to know who is getting federal money and how much he is receiving," he continued. "We can't have a secret government payment system for doctors and hospitals when we don't have that for anyone else."

In remarks made Friday for release Sunday, the head of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said the listing did not invade doctors' privacy because of the public money involved.

The question of whether to list protesting doctors has slowed attempts to correct an errorriddled list published in March which named 409 solo practitioners, 1,752 group practices and 58 laboratories.

Asking not to be included on the new list are 214 of 469 physicians who complained of errors concerning their 1975 earnings from Medicare, the federal health assistance program for the elderly.

"I have been told that about half of the complaining doctors don't want to be listed and won't supply any other information," Califano said.

Without added information from the doctors, it may not be possible to correct all the errors.

But Califano said the physicians would be listed anyway, with a notation of the complaint and whether he or she declined to give further information.

Califano, who has apologized to physicians and the American Medical Association for the previous errors, said the new list should be out in a few weeks.

Uganda minister may've defected

LONDON (AP) — A senior government minister sent by President Idi Amin to argue Uganda's case before the U.N. Human Rights Commission may have defected to Britain, the Sunday Times reported.

The paper said Justice Minister Godfrey Lule, 42, and his family were in Britain and "it is understood that he has asked the Home Office for permission to stay."

A Foreign Office spokesman said Lule was in Britain "for medical reasons" and had asked that his visa be extended. He declined further comment.

If the report is true, Lule would be the second senior Ugandan official to flee to Britain this month. Health Minister Henry Kyemba, who left Uganda to attend a health conference in Geneva, fled to Britain June 5 and requested political asylum.

The Sunday Times quoted Kyemba as saying more than 100,000 Ugandans had been killed by Amin's troops and police during his six-year rule.

According to the newspaper, Lule left Uganda last March to attend the Geneva meeting and afterward traveled to Britain "on the pretext of needing medical treatment." His wife and seven children arrived in Britain by way of Kenya later, it said.

The paper said Lule decided to flee the country after the death last February of Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum and two cabinet ministers, whom Amin said were killed in a traffic accident after their arrest on subversion charges.

Kyemba told the Sunday Times the three had been murdered.

Korean War anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The two Koreas marked the 27th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on Saturday with mass rallies above and below the 38th parallel. Each called for the ouster of the other's leader.

But quiet was reported in the rocky demilitarized zone, nearly two miles wide and 151 miles long, separating the armies of the Communist North and U.S.-backed South.

In an interview with the Paris daily Le Monde, North Korea's Communist President Kim Il-sung said two Koreas ought to be reunited in a confederation, but that U.S. troops in the South posed the major obstacle.

South Koreans marked the aniversary with vast anti+Communist rallies and warnings that North Korea was scheming to repeat its June 25, 1950, surprise attack on the South. Thousands of Koreans demonstrating in Seoul called for the ouster of the Communist regime in the North.

Search for racial peace on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is quickening its search for racial peace in subcontinental Africa to head off mounting turbulence in white-ruled South Africa, Rhodesia and Namibia.

But the U.S. effort is being challenged, on some levels, by South Africa, militarily the strongest state on the continent.

An overview of the situation, pieced together from information given last week by American and South African diplomats, disclosed:

—The South African government of Prime Minister John Vorster has set out directly to rally the backing of anti+Carter elements in this country for South Africa's rejection of a U.S. demand that a one-manone-vote system be introduced into South Africa.

—The government of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith has reaffirmed its readiness to transfer power to a black majority regime by 1978 but only if certain tough conditions are fulfilled.

—Five key Western nations, including the United States, have insisted the United Nations must supervise and control the political and electoral transition to independence in Namibia (formerly South+West Africa) next year.

Car gas tax set for 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax on gas-guzzling cars, as approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, would take effect in 1979.

Under the panel's plan, the tax on the sale of a new 1979 model car that gets less than 15 miles per gallon of gas would be $330. By 1985 models, the tax on a car that got less than 23.5 miles would be $3,856.

President Carter had wanted the tax to begin with 1978 models and to bring in a total of $7.7 billion by 1985. The committee version would bring an estimated total revenue of $915 million by 1985.

In 1985, the committee's version would save an estimated 170,000 barrels of petroleum a day. The nation currently uses 17.4 million barrels daily.

Under the committee's version, experts estimate that only one U.S. car, Chrysler's New Yorker, would be subject to a gas-guzzler tax in 1979. It would mean the buyer of the $10,000 New Yorker would pay a $339 tax.

For 1985 models, the gas guzzler tax would start at $397 for cars in the 23 mpg range and hit a maximum $3,856 for those getting less than 12.5 mpg.

Howard Hughes used drugs

In a copyrighted story, the newspaper said Hughes' 6-foot-4, 150-pound frame shrunk to 6-foot-1 and 94 pounds after years of drug dependence.

The industrialist died on April 5, 1976, at the age of 70. In the last 15 years of his life, the Inquirer said, he never left his bedroom except to move from one hotel suite to another or from a house to a hotel.

He spent most of his time sitting in a chair, often wearing no clothes, and the only persons who saw him were a select circle of personal aides, the newspaper said.

The Sunday Times quoted Kyemba as saying more than 100,000 Ugandans had been killed by Amin's troops and police during his six-year rule.

According to the newspaper, Lule left Uganda last March to attend the Geneva meeting and afterward traveled to Britain "on the pretext of needing medical treatment." His wife and seven children arrived in Britain by way of Kenya later, it said.

The paper said Lule decided to flee the country after the death last February of Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum and two cabinet ministers, whom Amin said were killed in a traffic accident after their arrest on subversion charges.

Kyemba told the Sunday Times the three had been murdered.

Korean War anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The two Koreas marked the 27th anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on Saturday with mass rallies above and below the 38th parallel. Each called for the ouster of the other's leader.

But quiet was reported in the rocky demilitarized zone, nearly two miles wide and 151 miles long, separating the armies of the Communist North and U.S.-backed South.

In an interview with the Paris daily Le Monde, North Korea's Communist President Kim Il-sung said two Koreas ought to be reunited in a confederation, but that U.S. troops in the South posed the major obstacle.

South Koreans marked the aniversary with vast anti+Communist rallies and warnings that North Korea was scheming to repeat its June 25, 1950, surprise attack on the South. Thousands of Koreans demonstrating in Seoul called for the ouster of the Communist regime in the North.

Search for racial peace on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is quickening its search for racial peace in subcontinental Africa to head off mounting turbulence in white-ruled South Africa, Rhodesia and Namibia.

But the U.S. effort is being challenged, on some levels, by South Africa, militarily the strongest state on the continent.

An overview of the situation, pieced together from information given last week by American and South African diplomats, disclosed:

—The South African government of Prime Minister John Vorster has set out directly to rally the backing of anti+Carter elements in this country for South Africa's rejection of a U.S. demand that a one-manone-vote system be introduced into South Africa.

—The government of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith has reaffirmed its readiness to transfer power to a black majority regime by 1978 but only if certain tough conditions are fulfilled.

—Five key Western nations, including the United States, have insisted the United Nations must supervise and control the political and electoral transition to independence in Namibia (formerly South+West Africa) next year.

Car gas tax set for 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax on gas-guzzling cars, as approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, would take effect in 1979.

Under the panel's plan, the tax on the sale of a new 1979 model car that gets less than 15 miles per gallon of gas would be $330. By 1985 models, the tax on a car that got less than 23.5 miles would be $3,856.

President Carter had wanted the tax to begin with 1978 models and to bring in a total of $7.7 billion by 1985. The committee version would bring an estimated total revenue of $915 million by 1985.

In 1985, the committee's version would save an estimated 170,000 barrels of petroleum a day. The nation currently uses 17.4 million barrels daily.

Under the committee's version, experts estimate that only one U.S. car, Chrysler's New Yorker, would be subject to a gas-guzzler tax in 1979. It would mean the buyer of the $10,000 New Yorker would pay a $339 tax.

For 1985 models, the gas guzzler tax would start at $397 for cars in the 23 mpg range and hit a maximum $3,856 for those getting less than 12.5 mpg.

Howard Hughes used drugs

In a copyrighted story, the newspaper said Hughes' 6-foot-4, 150-pound frame shrunk to 6-foot-1 and 94 pounds after years of drug dependence.

The industrialist died on April 5, 1976, at the age of 70. In the last 15 years of his life, the Inquirer said, he never left his bedroom except to move from one hotel suite to another or from a house to a hotel.

He spent most of his time sitting in a chair, often wearing no clothes, and the only persons who saw him were a select circle of personal aides, the newspaper said.

Crowd-pleasing match

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors, in and out of trouble all day, finally overcame the stiff challenge of another former champion, Stan Smith, and joined three other American men Saturday in the quarter-finals of the centenary Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

Connors edged Smith 7-9, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 in a fluctuating, four-hour thriller that finally saw the 1972 All-England champion falter at vital points and throw away his chance for an upset.

Meanwhile, defending champion Chris Evert and Billie Jean King, six times the women's Wimbledon champion, both escaped trouble to advance to the next round and set up a quarter-final meeting of the top seed vs. the sentimental favorite.

The other American men who made it to the quarter-finals were 18-year-old John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y., Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., and Billy Martin, 20, of Evanston, Ill.

McEnroe, ranked No. 270 in the United States, downed Sandy Mayer, Mendham, N.J., 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1; Gerulaitis defeated Dick Stockton, Carrollton, Tex., 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, and Martin fought for four hours to dispose of the last British hope, Mark Cox, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 0-6, 9-7.

The men's quarter-finals lineup is Connors vs. Byron Bertram, South Africa; McEnroe vs. Phil Dent, Australia; Gerulaitis vs. Martin, and defending champion Bjorn Borg, Sweden, vs. Ilie Nastase, Romania.

Miss Evert fell behind in both sets—1-5 in the first and 0-2 in the second—before rallying to beat South African Greer Stevens 8-6, 6-4. Ms. King rebounded to oust Marise Kruger, another South African, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

The women's quarter-final lineup has Miss Evert vs. Ms. King; Virginia Wade, England, vs. Rosie Casals; Kerry Reid, Australia, vs. Sue Barker, England, and Betty Stove, The Netherlands, vs. Martina Navratilova.

Smith, who has seen many lean years since his Wimbledon triumph, found his old form in fits and starts and threatened to oust Connors, the 1974 champion.

For long spells Smith scored regularly with his first service and looked capable of winning. But there were fatal periods in which his service lapsed, and that was when Connors came back.

The last game of the first set was as good as any Smith played in his heyday, when he was the top player in the world. He hit a superb running forehand pass and passed Connors twice more for a decisive service break.

The match flowed back and forth to two sets all, but Connors took a 2-0 lead in the final set and Smith's brave bid appeared over.

Suddenly, though, Smith leaped to life again, collared Connors' service and raced to a 3-2 lead. The 8,000 fans at Wimbledon's No. 1 court were all for Smith and the excitement reached fever pitch.

Serving for a 4-3 lead, Smith hit a tremendous ace and reached 40-30. Then he unaccountably failed with two simple volleys and lost the game.

They were the last of many vital mistakes by Smith. Throughout the match, Smith missed chances to upset the man he has not beaten since 1974.

This time, Connors was in the mood to finish off his man and he won the last two games, dropping only three points.

McEnroe joined a small band of players who have reached the Wimbledon quarter-finals after playing through the qualifying tournament.

"I didn't even imagine I would get through the qualifying and make the tournament," McEnroe said after eliminating Sandy Mayer with the best serving and volleying of his life.

The day's most gallant loser was Tim Gullikson, the right-handed half of the Onalaska, Wis., twins. After his third five-set marathon in successive rounds, he was ousted by Dent, who won 6-3, 3-6, 9-8, 1-6, 9-7.

Borg, the defending champion, overcame Wojtek Fibak of Poland 7-5, 6-4, 6-2; Nastase came from behind to defeat Tom Okker of The Netherlands 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, and Bertram ousted Kim Warwick, Australia, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, in the other men's fourth-round matches.

In women's matches, Miss Barker downed Lea Antonoplis, Glendora, Calif., 6-0, 6-4; Mrs. Reid beat Kathy May, Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-2, 6-1; Miss Stove downed Australian Helen Cawley, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3; Ms. Casals beat Linky Boshoff, South Africa, 8-6, 6-3, and Miss Wade beat Mariana Simionescu, Romania, 9-7, 6-3.

Miss Evert, who had lost only seven games in three previous rounds, found herself struggling in cold, threatening weather Saturday. In the early stages, Miss Stevens took a series of points by hitting in front of Miss Evert, who seemed uncomfortable at the net.

But Miss Evert finally showed the form that has made her the No. 1 female in the world, gettinv out of trouble by saving two set points at 1-5, taking the lead at 7-6 and taking the first set.

Miss Stevens immediately broke Miss Evert in the second set for a 2-0 lead, but the champion tied it with a break of her own. Miss Evert finished the 10th game with a backspin forehand that just cleared the net and dropped dead.

Ms. King, making her major-tournament comeback at Wimbledon, recovered quickly after losing the first set to Miss Kruger. Back in winning form, Ms. King lost only one game in the final two sets.

Swim club opens pool campaign

The Sikeston swim team opened the '77 season against teams from Cape Girardeau and Ste. Geneveive in a triangular meet at Cape's Capaha Pool on Saturday. It was the first outing for many of Sikeston's swimmers, since the team is almost double in size of that in previous years. This year also marks the debut of a full-time Sikeston coach, former team member Cristy Baker.

While the Cape team with the advantage of year-round pools dominated many events, the Sikeston swimmers placed ahead of the Ste. Genevieve swimmers, who share the handicap of having only a summer training season.

Tracy captures hearts of press

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "Alice in Wonderland."

"Super Kid."

"Little Miss Marvel."

British journalists pulled out all literary stops Saturday in singing the praises of tennis' 14-year-old wonder child who became the youngest ever to play in the 100-year-old Wimbledon championships.

Attired in a too-big white dress with a blue bow tied in the back, wee Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, Calif., bowed 6-1, 6-1 to defending champion Chris Evert on center court Friday.

The fragile-looking, 90-pound twig of a girl lost the match but won the centenary Wimbledon. It's been years since anyone created a greater sensation or a stronger ovation.

Everybody loved her, but none more than the purple phrase makers of the English press.

"Alice in Wonderland came to the centre court yesterday at centenary Wimbledon," wrote Peter Wilson of the Daily Mirror. "It was as though one of the original Tenniel illustrations to 'Alice' had stepped out of its frame."

Ian Branes of the Daily Express called her "Miss Marvel" and said: "She hits the ball—double-fisted on the backhand and ferociously on the forehand—like the champion she will surely be in the 1980s."

Laurie Pignon of the Daily Mail had his story headlined "Tomorrow's Girl Arrives", reporting: "Tracy Austin gave tennis a glimpse into tomorrow's world."

Tracy shared block-letter headlines with the announcement that the Duchess of Kent was expecting another child at age 44.

"Ta-Ta, Tracy, But You'll Be Back!" Said one 72-point streamer.

"A Shirley Temple in tennis shoes," added a caption.

Lance Tingas of the Daily Telegraph wrote: "The rigour of Miss Austin's game was awesome in view of the slight body from which it came. One can only assume that in the normal course of events she is likely to be a champion, because already she is phenomenal."

David Irvine of the Manchester Guardian said the crowd "left convinced that as surely as Wimbledon is 100 years old, they had seen a future women's champion."

And from the pen of the Times' Geoffrey Green, who referred to Chris Evert as "the spider who frightened little Miss Muffet away," came this comment:

"Unless one is widely wrong, this little Miss Muffett, with her coltish legs, her hair bunched and her teeth in braces has the future in her hands ... her time will come ... it may not be too far distant."

Simmons' homer sinks Phillies 3-2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ted Simmons socked a two-run homer in the seventh inning off former teammate Steve Carlton, lifting the St.Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 triumph overnthe Philadelphia Phillies Saturday night.

Simmons' blast, his ninth of the year, backed the combined eight-hit pitching of Bob Forsch, 9-4, and Rawly Eastwick. Forsch surrendered a solo homer to the Phillies' Mike Schmidt, his 19th of the year, in the third inning.

Carlton, 9-4, had limited St.Louis to three hits and enjoyed a 2-1 advantage going into the seventh. However, Hector Cruz led off the seventh with an infield hit and advanced to second on a throwing error. Simmons then pounded Carlton's next delivery high into the left field seats for the victory.

Second baseman Mike Tyson made a strong play to retire Bake McBride on a grounder up the middle in the first after Forsch surrendered a single to Schmidt and a walk to Greg Luzinski.

Singles by Tim McCarver, Ted Sizemore and Carlton followed by Garry Maddox' sacrifice fly sent Philadelphia into a 1-0 lead in the second.

St. Louis tied it 1-1 in the bottom of the inning on Cruz' double, a long fly by Simmons and Keith Hernandez' grounder but the Phillies moved back on top when Schmidt socked his 12th homer in 18 games to start the third.

Forsch doubled for St. Louis with one out in the third but was stranded at second base when Carlton induced Jerry Mumphrey and Garry Templeton to fly out.

Carlton, stalled in his bid to become the National League's third 10-game winner, stared the game with a 16-5 record against St. Louis, which traded him to Philadelphia before the 1972 season.

Homers power K.C. past Oakland 6-4

OAKLAND (AP) — Four home runs, including two-run blasts by rookie Joe Zdeb and Fred Patek, helped the Kansas City Royals defeat the Oakland A's 6-4 Saturday.

Zdeb's homer, his first in the major leagues, came off reliever Bob Lacey, who replaced A's starter Mike Norris with one out and a runner on first in the seventh and snapped a 2-2 deadlock. Patek hit his home run in the ninth after Dave Nelson doubled.

Starter Jim Colborn, 9-7, gave up a two-run homer to Tony Armas in the fifth inning and a two-run blast to Mitchell Page in the ninth before being relieved by Mark Littell.

Kansas City took an early 2-0 lead on a solo homers by Darrell Porter in the second and John Mayberry in the fourth.

After Armas' homer tied the score, Norris, 2-3, walked Pete LaCock to lead off the Royals' seventh and Fred Patek sacrificed to move him to second. Lacey got pinch-hitter Cookie Rojas, but then gave up Zdeb's go-ahead homer.

Colborn retired the first 10 batters he faced. Marty Perez singled with one out in the fourth inning and Jerry Tabb walked. Colborn, who struck out seven batters, got Earl Williams and Wayne Gross on strikes to end the inning.

With one out in the fifth, Page walked and Armas homered, his sixth of the season. The A's got a runner on third in the sixth inning when Tabb led off with a single, went to second on a balk and to third on a sacrifice. Colborn then got Gross and Manny Sanguillen on infield popups to retire the side.

The Kansas City pitcher ran into trouble in the ninth when Williams led off with a single and was forced at second by Sanguillen. Page then lined a homer into the right field bleachers, bringing on Littell.

The Royals reliever got pinch-hitter Willie Crawford on a grounder to end the game.

The loss was the ninth in the last 10 games and fourth straight for Oakland.

Crowd-pleasing match

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors, in and out of trouble all day, finally overcame the stiff challenge of another former champion, Stan Smith, and joined three other American men Saturday in the quarter-finals of the centenary Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

Connors edged Smith 7-9, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 in a fluctuating, four-hour thriller that finally saw the 1972 All-England champion falter at vital points and throw away his chance for an upset.

Meanwhile, defending champion Chris Evert and Billie Jean King, six times the women's Wimbledon champion, both escaped trouble to advance to the next round and set up a quarter-final meeting of the top seed vs. the sentimental favorite.

The other American men who made it to the quarter-finals were 18-year-old John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y., Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., and Billy Martin, 20, of Evanston, Ill.

McEnroe, ranked No. 270 in the United States, downed Sandy Mayer, Mendham, N.J., 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1; Gerulaitis defeated Dick Stockton, Carrollton, Tex., 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, and Martin fought for four hours to dispose of the last British hope, Mark Cox, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 0-6, 9-7.

The men's quarter-finals lineup is Connors vs. Byron Bertram, South Africa; McEnroe vs. Phil Dent, Australia; Gerulaitis vs. Martin, and defending champion Bjorn Borg, Sweden, vs. Ilie Nastase, Romania.

Miss Evert fell behind in both sets—1-5 in the first and 0-2 in the second—before rallying to beat South African Greer Stevens 8-6, 6-4. Ms. King rebounded to oust Marise Kruger, another South African, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

The women's quarter-final lineup has Miss Evert vs. Ms. King; Virginia Wade, England, vs. Rosie Casals; Kerry Reid, Australia, vs. Sue Barker, England, and Betty Stove, The Netherlands, vs. Martina Navratilova.

Smith, who has seen many lean years since his Wimbledon triumph, found his old form in fits and starts and threatened to oust Connors, the 1974 champion.

For long spells Smith scored regularly with his first service and looked capable of winning. But there were fatal periods in which his service lapsed, and that was when Connors came back.

The last game of the first set was as good as any Smith played in his heyday, when he was the top player in the world. He hit a superb running forehand pass and passed Connors twice more for a decisive service break.

The match flowed back and forth to two sets all, but Connors took a 2-0 lead in the final set and Smith's brave bid appeared over.

Suddenly, though, Smith leaped to life again, collared Connors' service and raced to a 3-2 lead. The 8,000 fans at Wimbledon's No. 1 court were all for Smith and the excitement reached fever pitch.

Serving for a 4-3 lead, Smith hit a tremendous ace and reached 40-30. Then he unaccountably failed with two simple volleys and lost the game.

They were the last of many vital mistakes by Smith. Throughout the match, Smith missed chances to upset the man he has not beaten since 1974.

This time, Connors was in the mood to finish off his man and he won the last two games, dropping only three points.

McEnroe joined a small band of players who have reached the Wimbledon quarter-finals after playing through the qualifying tournament.

"I didn't even imagine I would get through the qualifying and make the tournament," McEnroe said after eliminating Sandy Mayer with the best serving and volleying of his life.

The day's most gallant loser was Tim Gullikson, the right-handed half of the Onalaska, Wis., twins. After his third five-set marathon in successive rounds, he was ousted by Dent, who won 6-3, 3-6, 9-8, 1-6, 9-7.

Borg, the defending champion, overcame Wojtek Fibak of Poland 7-5, 6-4, 6-2; Nastase came from behind to defeat Tom Okker of The Netherlands 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, and Bertram ousted Kim Warwick, Australia, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, in the other men's fourth-round matches.

In women's matches, Miss Barker downed Lea Antonoplis, Glendora, Calif., 6-0, 6-4; Mrs. Reid beat Kathy May, Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-2, 6-1; Miss Stove downed Australian Helen Cawley, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3; Ms. Casals beat Linky Boshoff, South Africa, 8-6, 6-3, and Miss Wade beat Mariana Simionescu, Romania, 9-7, 6-3.

Miss Evert, who had lost only seven games in three previous rounds, found herself struggling in cold, threatening weather Saturday. In the early stages, Miss Stevens took a series of points by hitting in front of Miss Evert, who seemed uncomfortable at the net.

But Miss Evert finally showed the form that has made her the No. 1 female in the world, gettinv out of trouble by saving two set points at 1-5, taking the lead at 7-6 and taking the first set.

Miss Stevens immediately broke Miss Evert in the second set for a 2-0 lead, but the champion tied it with a break of her own. Miss Evert finished the 10th game with a backspin forehand that just cleared the net and dropped dead.

Ms. King, making her major-tournament comeback at Wimbledon, recovered quickly after losing the first set to Miss Kruger. Back in winning form, Ms. King lost only one game in the final two sets.

Goettel wins Mo.-Amateur thriller

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Dennis Goettel of Carthage beat Jim Holtgrieve of St. Louis in a sensational round and he'll probably have to be just as brilliant Sunday if he is going to beat Bruce Hollowell, a veteran campaigner from Springfield, for the Missouri amateur golf championship.

Goettel, who is 6-7 and has his eye on the pro tour, again put his accurate short game to work on the back nine at the Country Club of Missouri and beat Holtgrieve 1-up in their semifinal match Saturday.

He used only 67 strokes and Holtgrieve had a 69 on the par 72 course.

Hollowell birdied three of the first nine holes and beat Brian Boudria of Jefferson City 3 and 2. Although a bogie on No. 9 left him only 2-up at the turn, Hollowell was practically assured of victory when Boudria bogeyed No. 13.

Goettell and Hollowell met head-to-head in a recent tournament at Kansas City's Indian Hills Country Club.

"I killed him," Hollowell joked Saturday.

"It was some fantastic golf," Goettel said.

Hollowell won on the second extra hole.

In Sunday's 36-hole contest between them, Goettel would seem to have a psychological edge. His game has seemed to fit the course's closely knit back nine like a glove and he won its recent Phil Cotton Tournament with a 7-under 67-70—137.

But Hollowell also has a fine short iron and putting game, and he won the state amateur in 1975. Goettel was runnerup last year.

Goettel had a stroke on Holtgrieve when they reached the turn Saturday, but only by reason of a great recovery on No. 6. Goettel's approach shot went past the green but his chip from a bad downhill lie left him a four-foot putt and he got it down for a par.

Cubs rally; beat Mets for 5th straight

CHICAGO (AP) — Doubles by Larry Biittner and Bill Buckner keyed a four-run ninth-inning rally Saturday to give the Chicago Cubs their fifth straight victory, a 5-4 decision over the New York Mets.

The Mets took a 4-1 lead into the ninth when Steve Swisher singled. Skip Lockwood retired pinch hitter Greg Gross, but Ivan DeJesus doubled. Larry Biittner then doubled off first baseman John Milner's glove to chase home two runs.

The Cubs tied the game when Buckner's long fly in left center dropped for a double when outfielders Lee Mazzilli and Steve Henderson collided.

Bobby Murcer was given an intentional walk and Jerry Morales also walked to fill the bases off reliever Bob Apodaca, 2-3. Manny Trillo then bounced to third baseman Doug Flynn, who stepped on third for one out. But his thcow to first for an attempted double play was too late as pinch-runner Mick Kelleher scored the winning run.

Groucho's life no laughing matter

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A chef who worked for Groucho Marx has told of 22 bizarre months in the comedian's household, where the dinner table was "an explosive battlefield" and the aged comedian's companion dreamed of inheriting all his money.

John Edward Ballow's memories were contained in a 368-page, three-volume sworn deposition filed in connection with Erin Fleming's bid for conservatorship of the frail 86-year-old comedian.

A Superior Court trial is scheduled July 18 to decide whether Miss Fleming, Marx's long-time companion, secretary and manager, should be named permanent conservator.

The comedian's son, Arthur, has won the first round of court battles by having the 37-yearold woman removed last month as conservator, after witnesses contended she had abused Marx. Two private detectives stated barbituate-containing hypodermic syringes were concealed outside Marx's Beverly Hills home.

"She wanted to be conservator and she wanted to inherit as much as she could," the 27-year-old chef alleged in the documents made public Friday.

On the same day, Marx returned to Cedars+Sinai Medical Center, where spokesman Larry Baum said Friday he was suffering from pneumonitis, "a kind of benign pneumonia." He had been released from the hospital earlier in the week after undergoing hip surgery.

And on Friday, his long-time friend Nat Perrin, 72, asked Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie to be relieved of his responsibilities as Marx's temporary conservator because "it's been far too much of a strain for myself and my wife." Perrin described Marx as "quite sick, quite feeble."

In the deposition, Ballow alleged that Miss Fleming convinced Marx to tear up all of his pictures of his daughter, Melinda. "And at lunch that day, he said, 'I don't have any children,'" Ballow recalled.

Frequently, Ballow said Miss Fleming railed against Marx's son, Arthur. The chef said she told Marx: "You don't love him, Groucho. I'm here. Don't worry about Arthur. Arthur doesn't deserve anything from you."

He said he saw Miss Fleming gag Marx by forcing a linen napkin into his mouth until he turned blue. On other occasion, he said she shoved a plate of food in Marx's face.

Miss Fleming was not available for comment but has maintained that she has done nothing that was not in Marx's best interest and theirs was a close, loving relationship.

"There were tons of incidents at that dinner table," he said. "It was like an explosive battlefield."

"She would drive him to the point that he was incapable of even sitting in his chair," Ballow said. "He was just a mass of nerves (from) the screaming alone."

He said Miss Fleming had frequently ordered a nurse to administer drugs to Marx even though doctors had advised that they could kill him.

"If she got him upset ... she would always come up as a way of, I felt, a way of soothing her own conscience, smack him full of those things (drugs) and that would calm him down," Ballow said.

Ballow said a doctor had told him "Mr. Marx could die any second. He's on a very thin line. He's not a strong man. He's had many strokes."

For a time, he said Miss Fleming was intent on having Marx adopt her. Ballow said a woman psychiatrist interviewed Groucho twice about the matter.

Another of Miss Fleming's plans, he said, was to sell Marx's house, and move him, perhaps, to a penthouse somewhere.

"I said, 'That sounds like a real drag. Do you realize that might be depressing? This is his castle; this is what he worked his entire life for.'

"And she said, 'To hell with the castle. He'll do what I tell him to do.'"

At one point in the deposition, one of the attorneys hinted Ballow might be exaggerating the situation. The chef replied: "I can't paint any picture uglier than really occurred in that home."

He indicated he had received phone calls urging him not to testify, and he said, "I am very afraid of Erin Fleming and always have been."

Ballow insisted that his motivation for telling all was to right some of the "many injustices" that he witnessed in the Marx household.

Groucho's life no laughing matter

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A chef who worked for Groucho Marx has told of 22 bizarre months in the comedian's household, where the dinner table was "an explosive battlefield" and the aged comedian's companion dreamed of inheriting all his money.

John Edward Ballow's memories were contained in a 368-page, three-volume sworn deposition filed in connection with Erin Fleming's bid for conservatorship of the frail 86-year-old comedian.

A Superior Court trial is scheduled July 18 to decide whether Miss Fleming, Marx's long-time companion, secretary and manager, should be named permanent conservator.

The comedian's son, Arthur, has won the first round of court battles by having the 37-yearold woman removed last month as conservator, after witnesses contended she had abused Marx. Two private detectives stated barbituate-containing hypodermic syringes were concealed outside Marx's Beverly Hills home.

"She wanted to be conservator and she wanted to inherit as much as she could," the 27-year-old chef alleged in the documents made public Friday.

On the same day, Marx returned to Cedars+Sinai Medical Center, where spokesman Larry Baum said Friday he was suffering from pneumonitis, "a kind of benign pneumonia." He had been released from the hospital earlier in the week after undergoing hip surgery.

And on Friday, his long-time friend Nat Perrin, 72, asked Superior Court Judge Edward Rafeedie to be relieved of his responsibilities as Marx's temporary conservator because "it's been far too much of a strain for myself and my wife." Perrin described Marx as "quite sick, quite feeble."

In the deposition, Ballow alleged that Miss Fleming convinced Marx to tear up all of his pictures of his daughter, Melinda. "And at lunch that day, he said, 'I don't have any children,'" Ballow recalled.

Frequently, Ballow said Miss Fleming railed against Marx's son, Arthur. The chef said she told Marx: "You don't love him, Groucho. I'm here. Don't worry about Arthur. Arthur doesn't deserve anything from you."

He said he saw Miss Fleming gag Marx by forcing a linen napkin into his mouth until he turned blue. On other occasion, he said she shoved a plate of food in Marx's face.

Miss Fleming was not available for comment but has maintained that she has done nothing that was not in Marx's best interest and theirs was a close, loving relationship.

"There were tons of incidents at that dinner table," he said. "It was like an explosive battlefield."

"She would drive him to the point that he was incapable of even sitting in his chair," Ballow said. "He was just a mass of nerves (from) the screaming alone."

He said Miss Fleming had frequently ordered a nurse to administer drugs to Marx even though doctors had advised that they could kill him.

"If she got him upset ... she would always come up as a way of, I felt, a way of soothing her own conscience, smack him full of those things (drugs) and that would calm him down," Ballow said.

Ballow said a doctor had told him "Mr. Marx could die any second. He's on a very thin line. He's not a strong man. He's had many strokes."

For a time, he said Miss Fleming was intent on having Marx adopt her. Ballow said a woman psychiatrist intervewed Groucho twice about the matter.

Another of Miss Fleming's plans, he said, was to sell Marx's house, and move him, perhaps, to a penthouse somewhere.

"I said, 'That sounds like a real drag. Do you realize that might be depressing? This is his castle; this is what he worked his entire life for.'

"And she said, 'To hell with the castle. He'll do what I tell him to do.'"

At one point in the deposition, one of the attorneys hinted Ballow might be exaggerating the situation. The chef replied: "I can't paint any picture uglier than really occurred in that home."

He indicated he had received phone calls urging him not to testify, and he said, "I am very afraid of Erin Fleming and always have been."

Ballow insisted that his motivation for telling all was to right some of the "many injustices" that he witnessed in the Marx household.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

We wish to take this means to thank all those relatives, neighbors, and friends who shared our sadness in the loss of our beloved husband and father, Paul A. Grimsley. Your expressions of kindness and sympathy during our time of sorrow were greatly appreciated and will remain with us forever. The efforts of Dr. Jesse Page on behalf of our loved one are gratefully acknowledged and appreciated. Our heartfelt thanks are extended to the staff of the Crews-Welsh Funeral Home for their sustaining compassion during a very trying time, and we wish to thank the Rev. Dr. Arthur Fulbright, Rev. Homer Stallings and the Rev. Brent Mustoe for the beautiful and comforting service they conducted. The music supplied by Mr. Joel Allen and Mrs. Judy Nickells contributed greatly to the beauty of the service. The words which are written here are inadequate to express our feelings of appreciation, but our feelings can most nearly be expressed by two simple words -- "Thank You".

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

We wish to take this means to thank all those relatives, neighbors, and friends who shared our sadness in the loss of our beloved husband and father, Paul A. Grimsley. Your expressions of kindness and sympathy during our time of sorrow were greatly appreciated and will remain with us forever. The efforts of Dr. Jesse Page on behalf of our loved one are gratefully acknowledged and appreciated. Our heartfelt thanks are extended to the staff of the Crews-Welsh Funeral Home for their sustaining compassion during a very trying time, and we wish to thank the Rev. Dr. Arthur Fulbright, Rev. Homer Stallings and the Rev. Brent Mustoe for the beautiful and comforting service they conducted. The music supplied by Mr. Joel Allen and Mrs. Judy Nickells contributed greatly to the beauty of the service. The words which are written here are inadequate to express our feelings of appreciation, but our feelings can most nearly be expressed by two simple words -- "Thank You".

British strike becoming major ideological issue

LONDON (AP) — A 10-month-old labor dispute that recently has turned violent is threatening to become a major ideological issue in Britain at a time of economic malaise.

At 7 a.m. each weekday, about 1,000 policemen line up against a mixed army of strikers, pickets, labor union leaders and young leftist revolutionaries in two narrow streets around a film processing plant whose managing director refuses to recognize a union.

This bizarre scene in the seedy Dollis Hill district of northwest London has become a ritual rumble in which the two sides move with precision to kick, punch and claw each other at least once a day.

It also has the makings of a full-scale confrontation between left and right in Britain, where both political factions have been shaping up for a showdown for the last five years of economic stress.

The battle centers on the Grunwick plant and a dispute that began when Managing Director George Ward fired 80 of his 400 workers for joining a white collar union, the Association of Professional, Executive, Clerical and Computer Staffs — APEX. Forty other employes went on strike to support them. Ward refused to recognize the union.

The left has pitched in behind APEX. Other unions are sending men and money from all over the country to back the strikers in their escalating fight. And leftist students and a revolutionary fringe have joined in, eager for a cause and a scrap with the establishment.

A score of left-wing Labor party legislators have joined the picket lines. One, Audrey Wise, was arrested last week, one of more than 200 persons picked up in the street battles.

On the right, the antiunion National Association of Freedom is giving money to Grunwick to help it through and, along with the Conservative party's right wing, is waging a fierce propaganda campaign against the unions.

The dispute sputtered along for months with little trouble until police and pickets clashed earlier this month. It's been like that ever since — a daily brawl with scores of injured.

Mick McGahey, a Scottish coal mine union leader who joined the pickets Thursday, said after another miners' leader, Arthur Scargill, was arrested: "The Grunwick dispute could explode into the worst-ever industrial action in Britain's history."

Prime Minister James Callaghan, who leads the Labor party, declared in the House of Commons: "The situation is getting extremely serious. There are people latching onto this thing to turn an industrial dispute into a political battle."

Sir Geoffrey Howe, a leader of the opposition Conservative party, said there seems to be "no limit to the mob warfare that can be justified in the name of trade unionsm."

The Grunwick plant, a dirty red brick building, has been turned into a fortress with barbed wire strung along its walls.

Managing Director Ward makes no bones about his antipathy to the unions. "This firm is not antiunion," he told reporters. "It's nonunion."

The daily battle begins around 8 a.m. when a blue and white double-decker company bus runs the gantlet of the pickets and their allies to take workers into the plant.

Police line the narrow street leading to the back gate.

As the bus inches forward, the pickets and their supporters surge forward with a collective growl that builds to a roar of screams, curses, grunts and shouted orders.

On Friday, about 2,000 of them faced at least 1,000 police. Police officers dragged men and women from the mob. One young woman took a fist in the stomach, staggered from the melee and collapsed at a reporter's feet.

"Get them off me," she gasped, trembling with fright.

Another scratching, kicking girl in faded jeans was dragged away by her hair by a police officer, whose black tie had been torn off with a piece of his shirt.

The police carry no weapons, not even billy clubs. A 30-year-old constable of the Special Patrol Group had his head cut by a milk bottle Thursday, one of scores of police casualties since fighting broke out.

Once the workers slip into the factory, the punching and kicking fizzles out. Then the two sides pull back to their pre-battle positions — like the clearing of a chessboard to start another game.

Soweto tense during youth's funeral

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Angry Soweto blacks massed by the thousands Saturday for the burial of 17-year-old Philemon Tloana, whose death two days ago some witnesses blamed on a police beating. Witnesses said the mood at the funeral was one of volatile anger, but police kept their distance and no incidents were reported.

A white South African reporter, escorted to the graveside by black friends, said only the spark of a single incident was needed to make Soweto burn "as easily as a fire set in the tall dry grasslands surrounding the township."

High school students directed funeral traffic and nearly a dozen municipal buses were used as roadblocks to control the streams of cars with blacks.

At the graveside on the outskirts of Soweto mourners and spectators stood hundreds deep, witnesses said. One photographer estimated 25,000 blacks were massed at the cemetery and surrounding streets.

Tloana died during an incident June 15 when a store was being looted and a car firebombed in a Diepkloof shopping center. Witnesses said the youth collapsed after being beaten by police, but an autopsy by a state pathologist and a doctor appointed by Tloana's family reportedly revealed no assault marks on the body.

Several outbursts of violence have erupted in the sprawling township in the past week, fueled by memories of the bloody rioting of a year ago that took 600 lives across South Africa. Two blacks died and 23 were wounded in clashes with police Thursday.

Elsewhere in Africa:

—Marxist President Samora Machel of Mozambique said in a speech on the second anniversary of his country's independence from Portugal that it is under economic and military assault from imperialism, including raids from Rhodesia, that jeopardizes the country's freedom.

—The Lutheran World Federation, meeting in Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania, said its churches in southern Africa must reject racial segregation as a matter of faith. The resolution was adopted by an overwhelming vote, including those of South African delegates from all-white parishes.

—Ugandan President Idi Amin was quoted by the official Radio Uganda as denying an attempt was made to assassinate him one week ago. But he told a visiting American reporter his security forces had captured arms smuggled from Kenya and Tanzania, indicating some sort of plot to topple him.

—Hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians marched through Addis Ababa in a massive demonstration of support for the Marxist government of Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam. Revolution Square, the main site of the rally, was decorated with portraits of Marx and Lenin and the marchers chanted: "Revolutionary motherland or death."

—In Djibouti, scheduled to gain its independence from France on Monday, officials wondered which of two rival neighbors will attend the ceremony — Somalia or Ethiopia. Both countries in the past have claimed Djibouti and, while both now have said they would to respect its independence, each has said would move in if the other tried to.

Several outbursts of violence have erupted in the sprawling township in the past week, fueled by memories of the bloody rioting of a year ago that took 600 lives across South Africa. Two blacks died and 23 were wounded in clashes with police Thursday.

Elsewhere in Africa:

—Marxist President Samora Machel of Mozambique said in a speech on the second anniversary of his country's independence from Portugal that it is under economic and military assault from imperialism, including raids from Rhodesia, that jeopardizes the country's freedom.

—The Lutheran World Federation, meeting in Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania, said its churches in southern Africa must reject racial segregation as a matter of faith. The resolution was adopted by an overwhelming vote, including those of South African delegates from all-white parishes.

—Ugandan President Idi Amin was quoted by the official Radio Uganda as denying an attempt was made to assassinate him one week ago. But he told a visiting American reporter his security forces had captured arms smuggled from Kenya and Tanzania, indicating some sort of plot to topple him.

—Hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians marched through Addis Ababa in a massive demonstration of support for the Marxist government of Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam. Revolution Square, the main site of the rally, was decorated with portraits of Marx and Lenin and the marchers chanted: "Revolutionary motherland or death."

—In Djibouti, scheduled to gain its independence from France on Monday, officials wondered which of two rival neighbors will attend the ceremony — Somalia or Ethiopia. Both countries in the past have claimed Djibouti and, while both now have said they would to respect its independence, each has said would move in if the other tried to.

Danforth visits SeMo

U. S. Senator John Danforth, left, talks with Peter Myers, Matthews Route One, at Myers home, during a visit with area farmers, last Sunday. Danforth asked the farmers for their opinion on such issues as Lock and Dam 26, and wheat allotments. Danforth was making a tour through southeast Missouri. (Daily Standard photo)

Senators meets with farmers

Addressing a gathering of farmers in the basement of the Peter Myers home, near Matthews, last Sunday, U.S. Senator learned that according to the farmers, the best thing government could do about the farm industry is leave it alone. The farmers told Danforth that they had enough sense to stop producing a crop when there was no longer a market for it, and that they did not need the government to tell them how to farm, but the government could use some help in marketing U.S. farm products. Economy moves ahead with vigor

By CROCKETT SCOTT

"Unmistakable is the message contained in recent official statistics; the U.S. economy has continued to move ahead with vigor."

Source: Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York in its June survey.

"Indicators of sales, output, and income in April and early May improved ever the extraordinarily strong winter rebound readings of March," the bank notes.

"Most of the indicators, says Morgan Guaranty,,' started the second quarter at well above their average levels in the first quarter, thereby promising hefty second quarter gains--almost irrespective of what data for late May and June ultimately show.

" 'Real' GNP (Gross National Product--total of all goods and services--appears likely to record close to a seven percent annual rate of increase in the current quarter--impressive, indeed, in view of cancellation of the rebate, which earlier in the year had been counted on to stimulate demand of that magnitude."

Morgan Guaranty notes that "the second half of the year may be another matter; forecasts made in today's climate may prove to have been influenced unduly by the ebullience of current statistics. As far as the first half is concerned, though, disappointment with the pace of advance in economic activity would be unwarranted."

Despite an improving economy, the stock market shows little sustaining vigor, and central region investment bankers think they know the reason;--lack of confidence in the future; more precisely, lack of confidence in the future of profits.

Not everybody in the marketplace is pessimistic, however.

A number of investment banking firms and advisory services believe that stocks are near a turn to the upside.

The investment banking firm of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards of Los Angeles sees better times ahead.

The 1974-75 recession was actually the termination of a decade long economic cycle which probably will repeat itself, the firm believes. Conditions responsible for this recession are not apt to reoccur, Bateman Eichler asserts.

Nonetheless, this West Coast investment banking firm feels that the conservative appraisal of the economy and the stock market by investors, and a similar conservative approach to spending by businessmen and consumers acts to restrain inflation; and that, of course, is good.

An analyst associated with the firm, Robert T. Archibald, notes, however, that a dangerous aspect of the pessimism following a recession is the move to artificial stimulus by a concerned administration. Artificial stimuli often act to stir the fires of inflation.

On the positive side, he views the 1974-75 recession as the terminus of a decade old economic cycle; with exact conditions causing it not likely to be repeated.

So far as the stock market is concerned, Mid-South SEC registered security analysts disagree with this theses. They contend that the nature of the stock market--and the economy too--follows a boom and bust pattern; and that both work in such a manner; regardless of the activities of the Administration in power, the Congress and the Federal Reserve Board.

An advisory service based in Windson, Conn. suggests that the market "is reaching for bottom" currently, with most of the bad news discounted.

Renowned investment banking firm of Paine Webber Jackson and Curtis with offices in many big cities across the nation looks favorably upon the economy because of a likelihood of the peaking of short term interest rates and a decline in the price index for New York City food items.

Securities Corp. of Iowa, based in Cedar Rapids, believes common stock prices in numerous instances are cheap; particularly so in view of replacement costs of assets.

Sterling names new vice president

John F. Crowley has been named Vice President and General Merchandise Manager for Sterling Stores Company, Inc. The announcement was made today by Dave Grundfest, Jr., president of the Arkansas-based chain of Magic Mart Discount Department Stores, Sterling Variety and Department Department Stores.

The 51-year old Crowley joins Sterling after serving as senior merchandise vice president for the W.T. Grant Company, where he was responsible for $1.5 billion in sales.

Grundfest said that the position of general merchandise manager is a new one with our company, and that Crowley would be responsible for our total merchandising direction. "John Crowley brings to Sterling a wealth of experience and retail knowledge", Grundfest added.

Crowley has spent his entire life's effort in chain store retailing, joining W.T. Grant Company after receiving his BS degree from Holy Cross in 1948. He climbed through the ranks at grants as store manager, district manager, regional personnal and operations manager, regional merchandise manager and regional vice president before moving to New York as senior merchandise vice president. Recently, he has served several other retailers on a consultant basis.

$60 millions ride on FDA Mdecision

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Monsanto Co. has $60 million riding on a Food and Drug Administration decision concerning the safety of acrylonitrile, the chemical used in production of plastic Coca-Cola bottles.

Three plants, 15 million empty bottles and about 1,000 jobs await the FDA ruling, expected in September, on whether the chemical is harmful to human health.

FDA officials are worried that the chemical might leak into the product inside the bottle, causing birth defects, lesions or growth.

But company president John W. Hanley defends the acrylonitrile bottle against what he calls "bureaucratic overkill."

"The most exacting tests currently approved—tests capable of detecting acrylonitrile migration as low as 50 parts per billion—have consistently found no quantifiable acrylonitrile migration from the bottle to its contents," Hanley wrote in a letter to stockholders this spring.

However, in 1973, leaking was reported when acrylonitrile bottles containing beverages were held at a high temperature for an extended period of time.

FDA received a report last Jan. 12 indicating "that after 13 months some rats fed high doses of acrylonitrile in their drinking water had significantly lowered body weight."

Other effects, including lesions in the central nervous system and growths in the ear ducts and mammary region, were also noted. Another industry-backed study last fall suggested that acrylonitrile caused birth defects, the firm said.

The U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington stayed an FDA order in March banning the bottles. FDA hearings were held in Rockville, Md., this week to gather additional information, with the final decision to be made by Sept. 19.

"Technically, we would be legal to continue marketing the bottle," a spokesman for the firm said. "Although as a matter of good faith we agreed not to ship bottles in interstate commerce."

If the decision goes against Monsanto, the company will be stuck with bottle plants outside Hartford, Conn.; Baltimore, and Chicago. Retooling the production equipment is impossible, the firm said.

The company is searching for a one-shot use of the 15 million empty bottles. Use of acrylonitrile in making other types of bottles would not be economically feasible, the firm said.

Coca-Cola began marketing the 32-ounce, non-returnable bottle in July 1975. It was on sale in 12 Midwest and Northeast states, when production ceased. Coca-Cola had been taking all the bottles Monsanto could produce.

Nearly 600 hourly workers at the bottle-making plants and a resin-producing unit in Springfield, Mass., were affected by the shutdown, Monsanto said.

About 200 salaried workers and 200 contract workers employed by other companies at the Monsanto plants also lost their jobs.

Hourly workers were given assistance in locating other jobs and "liberal" severance pay, the company said. About 95 per cent of the salaried workers were offered other jobs in the company.

Besides a capital investment of $60 million, the company would lose $1 million in 1977 earnings, if the FDA decides to ban the bottles. Net income was $366 million last year.

Monsanto expects to lose about $30 million in sales this year because of the shutdown. The projected loss by 1980 is $100 million.

While the firm awaits the FDA decision, it continues to research a returnable acrylonitrile bottle, "which both FDA and EPA see as the most environmentally desirable method of packaging, and which could help enormously in dealing with the nation's litter problem," Hanley noted.

Ultimately, Hanley warned, the public could be hurt far worse than Monsanto by the acrylonitrile decision.

"For if creative programs of this kind are to be arbitrarily terminated, the threat of governmental restrictions will inevitably slow the rate of innovation which historically has fueled our nation's enviable economic growth and social progress."

Seized properties are Cuban question

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps the biggest obstacle to renewed trade with Cuba are those Yankee dollars the Caribbean nation owes American companies for properties exproprirated by Fidel Castro's government.

The U.S. Foreign Claims Settlement Commission has documented more than $1.6 billion in bills for seized properties, and some corporation executives aren't in the mood to write off their share of the amount.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber, for example, has informed shareholders that while "normalization of relations with Cuba is a desirable objective," it is essential "these claims be negotiated as part of any plan for restoring normal relations."

Charles Pilliod Jr., chairman, maintains the original claim of $5.1 million, for a 95,000-square-foot automotive tire plant, has now mounted to $13.7 million, the result of 6 per cent interest, compounded annually for 17 years.

If other companies press for interest also, the entire bill will be close to double the original $1.6 billion, even if simple rather than compound interest is assessed.

The trouble is that Cuba appears to be in no position to pay off such claims, and thus a stalemate demanding all the diplomatic and other skills of negotiators is likely to develop.

The only relief the American companies have obtained has been from the U.S. government in the form of tax deductions.

Goodyear, for example, told shareholders that it took an initial claim against taxes of slightly less than $2.7 million in 1960. after other adjustments, it said, its net loss amounted to $2,411,145.27.

Stripping method protects furniture

Everything at Dick Bussey's Bloomfield shop 401 N. Prairie comes natural. He is a furniture stripper, ridding wood of old layers of paint, varnish, stain, and antiqueing.

While Bussey's occupation isn't unique, his method is, at least for southeast Missouri.

Nearly every commercial furniture stripper in the state uses "hot tanks," in which items are stripped by boiling them in solvents. Bussey's system is more costly than the "hot tanks," but just a minute with him in the shop behind his home explains why he wouldn't settle for anything else.

Bussey has a deep appreciation--a love--for fine wood and he's found his customers do too. Incidentally more than 90 per cent of his first time customers are women, he says.

Older hardwood furniture, like mahogany, oak, walnut. birch and maple, is a paradox; it's delicate and at the same time it's the sturdiest furniture around. For both reasons, Bussey doesn't use the less expensive hot tank stripping method.

His solvents work at room temperature with baffling results. They quickly break down layer upon layer of paint, varnish or stain, but they don't harm putty, nails or glue used to assemble furniture. Bussey says the solvents won't harm cellophane tape, but they will clean the wood under it. On the other hand, the solvents consume decals and other kinds of tape.

When the furniture is stripped at Bussey's shop, it needs to dry 24 hours before it can be refinished.

That compares to a two-week drying period with hot tank stripping, because of the long exposure to liquid in the boiling process. Some wood actually becomes so "mushy" during the boiling, that it's possible to put a thumb print in it, Bussey says. Furthermore, the combination of heat and solvents with hot tanks, can weaken putty, and glue used to put furniture together.

Like the hot tank system, Bussey has an immersion tank, but the items being stripped only are submerged long enough to loosen the old finish. For larger items, the solvents are brushed on in an overflow tank. Without boiling or prolonged soaking, the furniture doesn't become "mushy" or weakened.

The sheer strength of older furniture is one thing that makes it so popular. Today, furniture rarely is built of the quality hardwoods because they are costly. Moreover, most manufacturers rely on glue and staples to assemble furniture, rather than using page nails, screws, or dove-tailing joints. The public has demanded a sacrifice in quality, for inexpensive, mass-produced furniture. That trend developed throughout the 1950's.

"Wood doesn't wear out," Bussey says. "Find a piece (of furniture) that's in pretty good shape and you can actually make it as good as the day it was sold." That's exactly what customers are having Bussey do.

By inheriting pre-mass produced furniture, or purchasing it at garage sales and auctions, and having it stripped and refinished, the public is learning they can own what would be very expensive furniture, if it were built today, the same way, with the same materials.

Bussey points with admiration and pride to an oak dining table and four chairs, he recently stripped. It had been painted several times. "I imagine a table made the way it is would cost $600 to $700 today."

What else are people having stripped?

Among the less common items in the shop now are an oak pie safe, an oak ice box that holds a 50 pound cake of ice, a bird's eye maple school desk top, an oak fireplace mantle, and a porch swing.

More common items include desks, chests of drawers, bed headboards, and a variety of chairs.

In the unusual category, one customer had Bussey strip the wood on some industrial bellows, that were operated by horses.

Besides durability, another reason older furniture is popular is the artistic design and carvings in the wood.

Whatever the reason, Bussey says he hasn't found a "slow period" in the stripping and refinishing business. Even at Christmas, when other service oriented businesses are slack because people are spending money on material goods, Bussey says he's found business as usual--very busy.

USDA issues county loan and purchase rates for 1977 wheat

WASHINGTON— County loan and purchase rates for 1977-crop wheat were issued June 17 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). The rates are based on the national loan rate for number 1 grade wheat of $2.25 per bushel, unchanged from 1976, announced April 4. Loan rates vary from county to county primarily to reflect differences in transportation costs.

The major changes from 1976 are--Adjustments to reflect changes in production patterns and prices received by farmers; increases in protein premiums to reflect market demand for higher protein wheats; and increases in discounts for number 2 and number 3 grade wheats of two and four cents per bushel respectively, to encourage delivery of higher quality wheat.

The net effect of these rate adjustments is a reduction from 1976 levels of one cent per bushel in all major wheat producing states and three cents per bushel in Arkansas and Louisiana and all states east of the Mississippi. Minor adjustments were made to individual county rates to retain past county-to-county loan relationships.

Copies of the 1977-crop wheat county loan rates will be sent to state offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and will also be available by writing to the Grains, Oilseeds and Cotton Division, USDA-ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Gideon farmer selected

James M. Wallace, left , a farmer from Gideon, was sworn in last week as Secretary of Agriculture Bob Berland's representative on the Federal Farm Credit Board. E. Riddell Lage, center, a Hood River, Oregon farmer and chairman of the Board and Donald E. Wilkinson, governor of the Farm Credit Administration in Washington, D.C., offer congratulations. The Board, whose 13 members serve part-time, sets broad national policies for lending institutions of the Farm Credit System. System lenders include Federal Land Banks, Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, Production Credit Associations and Banks for Cooperatives. The System has about $40 billion loans outstanding to farmers and farmer cooperatives.

Farmers can predict Stewarts Wilt Disease

NOVELTY, Mo. — Farmers can use winter temperatures to predict for themselves whether Stewart's wilt till be severe in their area, said Dean Barry, a USDA Agricultural Research Service entomologist.

They can do this because winter temperatures affect the survival rate of the corn flea beetle, a Missouri corn pest that carries the bacteria which causes Stewart's wilt, explained Barry, who works out of the University of Missouri-Columbia College of Agriculture.

Barry and David Hall, another UMC entomologist, demonstrated the method for predicting the disease June 16 at a Field Day at the Greenley Center near here. Barry and Hall are investigating the relationship between the corn flea beetle, the bacteria and corn so farmers can control possible loss from Stewart's wilt.

The computerized system for predicing the severity of the disease is based on winter temperatures and a beetle overwintering study they conducted. "Lower temperatures effectively reduce the survival rate," Hallsaid, "and when the beetle's survival rate drops, farmers are less likely to encounter Stewart's wilt in corn."

The forecasting process involves adding the average monthly temperatures for December, January and February and matching that total value to the same value in the index of a standardized chart.

"For example," Hall said, "the average monthly temperatures at Novelty were 23.2 degrees Fahrenheit for December (1976), 9.5 degrees in January and 28.9 degrees in February. Add these an you get 61.6. When you find this same value in the index on the chart, you see there is likely to be only a trace of Stewart's wild in both sweet and field corn."

Barry and Hall monitor fluctuations in the population of the corn flea beetle and estimate the generations per year by setting traps for the beetle.

The entomologists' research also includes determining why some corn varieties are more resistant to Stewart's wilt and estimating yeild losses in varieties treated with different innoculation methods.

The National Forest System is made up of 154 national forests, 19 national grasslands and other minor acreages which totaled 187,-101,120 acres in 44 states, as of June 30, 1973. Alaska had the most national forest area with 20.7 million acres, followed by Idaho and California with some 20 million acres each, The World Almanac says. Connecticut had only 10 acres of national forest.

UMC researching tillage methods at Greenley

NOVELTY, MO.— University of Missouri-Columbia researchers are into their second year of researching the soil erosion and yields brought about through different tillage methods at the Greenley Center near here.

"The trend is clearly going toward reducing the amount of tillage. The change is happening slowly, but it's happening because farmers realize they can save time and money and reduce soil erosion with less preparation," said Jim Steichen, UMC agricultural engineer.

Steichen discussed his research June 16 at the Greenley Center Field Day. He's looking at tillage methods used in growing corn.

"Corn yields in the four preparations in 1976 ranged from 73 to 75 bushels an acre," Steichen said. The four preparations were moldboard, chisel, disc and no-till.

"There's no significant difference there but this is a long term study," he said.

"With the 1977 crop in, it's easier to see the differences in the tillage methods when the crops are just coming up," he added.

"The important thing," said Steichen, "is to shoot for yields comparable to the moldboard techniques. Moldboard is a big fuel consumer. Chisel plowing at the same depth uses a third less fuel per acre. Additional savings can be achieved by using less secondary tillage as well."

Erosion control is also helped, Steichen said, with crop residue left on the surface.

"Tillage reduction leaving even half of the corn residue on the surface can be an effective means of reducing soil erosion by both wind and water," he said.

Another UMC researcher, Gary Colliver, agronomy specialist, is taking a look at crop rotation under different tillage methods.

Colliver is comparing two cropping systems, "continuous corn" and "corn-soybean rotation." His preparations include moldboard plow and disc; chisel plow and disc; and no-tillage.

He's also researching how nitrogen fertilization works with the different tillage techniques on the two cropping systems. He's testing urea and ammonium nitrate at different rates. Some plots receive no fertilization.

"With this long-term research, the effects of all these variables can be measured independently on replicated plots," Colliver said.

"It's all a part of an effort to see much yields are affected with the energy-saving tillage techniques."

Cancer causing fungus discussed

NOVELTY, Mo. — Grain elevator operators may refuse corn invected by a fungus that produces a cancer-causing compound, said Jack R. Wallin, a University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologist, June 16 at the Greenley Center Field Day.

The cancer-causing agent is an aflatoxin, an organic compound produced by the fungus Aspergillus flavus, said Wallin, who also works with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Wallin demonstrated methods of trapping Aspergillus flavus spores at the field day at the UMC research farm.

"We are trying to predict the amount of aflatoxin in the Novelty area," he said, "so we can forecast areas where aflatoxin is likely to be present."

A way to prevent the fungus has not been discovered yet. The best thing to do is store corn at a 15 per cent moisture level so the fungus won't grow, Wallin said.

The presence of Aspergillus flavus spores is determined by a "rotorod sampler," which is a portable, battery-operated whirling device with arms wrapped in Scotch tape.

Garlic dock driving wheat price down

BY JOSEPH J. MARKS
Science News Director

COLUMBIA— As if the price of wheat weren't bad enough, some growers are seeing its value cut by one-third because of the wild garlic weed.

"The worst problem seems to be in Stoddard County (southeast Missouri)," said Harold Kerr, weed scientist at the University of Missouri's Delta Center at Portageville.

"There are some farms with it in every Bootheel county, especially on lighter soils."

The soft red winter wheat is used in the milling of pastry (cakes, cookies, etc), and the wild garlic taste can get into the pastry unless it is specially handled. That means growers, who are are now receiving about $1.90 a bushel for their wheat, are having it further "docked" by about 60 cents a bushel.

Elroy J. Peters, USDA Agricultural Research Service scientist at the University of Missouri-Columbia, said "I haven't heard much about the garlic problem in other parts of the state.

"Our research shows that the garlic can be controlled by plowing it down about 8 to 10 inches deep around October 15 then planting the wheat shortly thereafter. Then farmers have to be careful to go light on tillage after plowing so they don't bring the garlic back up again."

Peters said the herbicide paraquat, will also control the garlic, but it hasn't yet been cleared for use on soft red winter wheat.

"If approved, it looks like a good scheme would be to delay planting wheat until about October 15 and to spray for wild garlic a day or two before planting. That's because the paraquat will kill the tops of other vegetation growing with the garlic."

Kerr warned growers about using acombination of Banvel and 2,4-D to control the garlic, because the herbicide mixture "causes shriveling of the wheat grain if used at a rate effective for garlic control."

William Murphy, UMC agronomy specialist, said most farmers were doinga good job of keeping wild garlic in check ever since they were docked as much as $2 per bushel a few years ago. At that time, though, the price of wheat was near-twice what it is today.

"The reason for the docking is that the garlic-y wheat has to be handled separately," said Murphy. "So it is sold for feed instead of pastry."

Murphy said this year's Missouri wheat crop is "about average" with yields running about 32 to 34 bushels per acre across the state.

Kerr reported "unusually good yields" in southeast Missouri with yields averaging 40-50 bushels an acre with some reports of 60 or more.

"We've had enough rain to carry things along on the wheat," said Murphy, "but we could run into problems with other crops if we don't get some rain soon.

"There's not enough subsoil moisture in most of Missouri and, in a short time, crops could deteriorate real fast. It's a spotty situation; but in most cases, Missouri farmers could use some rain throughout the growing season."

Back to the garlic, Peters said the main problem with it is that it comes equipped with hard shelled bulblets that grow under ground. About 30 per cent of them will sprout the first year; the rest, gradually over five years. Besides, any new garlic that emerges produces bulblets that follow the same sprouting process. That's why growers have to keep after the garlic year after year.

If wheat and garlic are harvested together, the grower's only recourse (besides taking a cut in price) is to store the garlic and wheat for six months or use artificial heat to dry the garlic bulblets to a point where a conventional fanning will remove them.

Storage procedures, besides being expensive, are far from the perfect solution.

"Some studies indicate that while garlic bulblets were no longer viable after seven months storage," said Peters, "However, in one test those artificial bulblets remained viable for two years."

President Woodrow Wilson's portrait is on the $100,000 bill, the largest denomination of U.S. curency.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Cotton Shippers Association wants the Agriculture Department to abandon its proposed two-method plan for assessing cotton growers to finance promotion and research and settle instead on a single procedure based on a flat rate.

The association said in comments filed with the department this week that the proposed dual method of collecting assessments from growers "represents the onset of more government through the proliferation of rules, procedures and guidelines which would not be necessary" if a fixed rate were adopted.

Involved is USDA's proposal announced June 3 which would let cotton handlers decide which of two proposals to follow in collecting an additional assessment on cotton sold by farmers.

The USDA proposal would have the value of cotton defined as the gross price per pound received by the producer before deductions for warehouse, transportation, marketing and other chanrges.

Under the program, growers would be charged the equivalent of four-tenths of one per cent of the value of each bale of cotton. The assessment will be in addition to $1 a bale already being charged growers to finance research and promotion projects overseen by the Cotton Board and the secretary of agriculture.

The department's two-way assessment plan calls for handlers to collect the fees by either using a chart which divides cotton sales prices into brackets of 10 cents a pound or simply a flat rate per bale.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Cotton Shippers Association wants the Agriculture Department to abandon its proposed two-method plan for assessing cotton growers to finance promotion and research and settle instead on a single procedure based on a flat rate.

The association said in comments filed with the department this week that the proposed dual method of collecting assessments from growers "represents the onset of more government through the proliferation of rules, procedures and guidelines which would not be necessary" if a fixed rate were adopted.

Involved is USDA's proposal announced June 3 which would let cotton handlers decide which of two proposals to follow in collecting an additional assessment on cotton sold by farmers.

The USDA proposal would have the value of cotton defined as the gross price per pound received by the producer before deductions for warehouse, transportation, marketing and other chanrges.

Under the program, growers would be charged the equivalent of four-tenths of one per cent of the value of each bale of cotton. The assessment will be in addition to $1 a bale already being charged growers to finance research and promotion projects overseen by the Cotton Board and the secretary of agriculture.

The department's two-way assessment plan calls for handlers to collect the fees by either using a chart which divides cotton sales prices into brackets of 10 cents a pound or simply a flat rate per bale.

FRIENDLY PANAMA

The Panama Canal may be a bone of contention between U.S. and Panamanian diplomats, but on a people-to- people basis, relations between the two countries have apparently never been better.

Despite the well-publicized controversy over who will eventually run the canal, American tourists continue to pour into Panama in record numbers. Panama's Government Tourist Bureau (IPAT) reports that 1977 is the seventh consecutive year the country has enjoyed an increase in American visitors. With the figures running nearly nine per cent over 1976 (which itself saw a 10 per cent increase over 1975), Pamama is laying ut the welcome mat for an anticipated 100,000 U.S. tourists this year.

According to one recently returned visitor, a major reason for the apparent disregard of the ticklish political situation by Americans heading for the isthmus is the "unabashed friendliness" of the great mass of the Panamanian people toward visitors from the States. Even those tourists expecting at least some resentment because of the sometimes heated canal negotiations have been hard put to find any, beyond a few anti-American posters nobody seems to pay much attention to.

THE STABILITY SPECIALISTS

Having "stabilized" the political situation in Angola — that's how U.N. ambassador Andrew Young describes it, anyway — Cuba seems intent on doing the same favor elsewhere in Africa.

The U.S. State Department has received reports that about 50 Cuban military advisers, and possibly several hundred troops, have been or are being sent to Ethiopia. They can't be sure, since Ethiopia's new Soviet- backed regime is in the process of kicking out just about every American in the country.

The Communists, of course, are the world's best stabilizers. They have stabilized Eastern Europe, whether the people there want to be stabilized or not. They have stabilized Vietnam. They would dearly love to stabilize everybody.

It is indeed noteworthy that little Cuba, which for its size has stabilized more people than any nation on earth — usually by putting them in prison — has enough energy left over to help out the cause in Africa.

WAR OVER PARKING

WASHINGTON— Futurists are now predicting that the world will end with neither a whimper nor a bang. It will end when enough people can't find a parking place. In Washington they are voting stern parking measures for their streets, which could change the American way of life as we know it.

In the past, commuters from the suburbs as well as Maryland and Virginia have driven into the city and have parked their cars all day long in front of someone's house, and then at the end of the day driven them back to the suburbs where they pay their taxes, and, according to all the real estate ads, live the good life.

But a court ruling has changed all this and now motorized incursions from the hinerlands will be prohibited. It could turn Washington into another Beirut.

When you take a person's parking spot away from him, you take away the dearest thing in his life. We are not really talking about parking--but the territorial imperative. Man has always been willing to go to war over real estate, and there is no land as precious to an American as a place where he can leave his car.

To quote Winston Churchill, "The storm clouds are gathering." In suburban shopping center malls militant parking leaders are inciting suburbanites to prepare for battle. City-dwellers are calling for armored tow trucks to repell an invasion. Hardliners from both sides are rallying the mobs.

A spokesman for the city-dwellers said, "We've had it up to here with the suburbanites' cars. They come in the winter and make potholes which we city-dwellers have to pay to repair. They come in the summertime and pollute our air. They make obscene remarks to our women, and think they can buy anything with their money. Well, now the courts have decided they can't park all day, wherever they want to. If they want to live in the suburbs let them stay here."

A leader of the out-of-town Free Parking Movement clenched his fist.

"The Declaration of Independence provides for the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," he said.

"But it doesn't say anything about parking," I told him.

"What do you think the 'pursuit of happiness' translates into?" he said bitterly. "There is no greater pursuit of it than trying to find a place to put your car. Americans spend more time looking for an empty parking space than they do watching television. Ninety percent of all their leisure time is wasted searching for a parking spot. We will not be told where we can and cannot park. If they lay a finger on the bumper of just one of our loved ones, it will mean civil war."

The voices of moderation are trying to find a peaceful solution to the problem. One that has been offered is that the West Bank of the Potomac be given to the suburbanites for all-day parking. They would have free access to Washington, providing they come over on foot. The Bethesda Heights would be offered for alternate day parking, and the Dulles Airport strip would be declared a neutral zone for tourists.

But both the city-swellers and the suburbanites are reluctant to accept the agreement.

The militant suburbanites, backed by their militant politicians, have declared that "Parking is not negotiable. Those parking spaces have been ours for 50 years and we will not give them up."

The equally militant city people are prepared to fight back. As one of their leaders said, "The first gas-guzzling commuter car that parks illegally on one of our streets will find a parking meter shoved up its tailpipe where it belongs."

"Excuse me, but has anyone seen a golf ball bounce by here?"

INCREASE RATES AFTER, NOT BEFORE

The Missouri Public Service Commission is considering allowing, and has in one case, already, utility companies to raise their rates sufficiently to take care of costs of construction that is under way or planned.

If that is approved for all utilities, the consumer will be providing the companies with construction funds, at no interest. The average business does not raise its charges because of costs it anticipates, it borrows money to handle costs until those costs are exactly known.

The utilities should have to do the same.

It's Your Taxes That Congress Is Spending

The 95th Congress has been in business for about two months, yet it has done much to feed the public's impression that legislators are more interested in high living at taxpayer's expense than attending to their duties.

On top of their new salary of $57,500 a year, members of Congress can take advantage of a long list of "perks" that cost taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars per congressman yearly:

--Increasing allowances for paying staff, based on number of constituents. For senators, the top allowance of $902,301 is up from $450,766 in 1969. For House staffs, top allowance is $255,144, up from $141,733 in 1969.

--Rent-free offices at the Capitol and in home districts with liberal furniture allowances.

--Sizable expense allowances for travel, telephones, telegrams, newsletters, field-office costs and official expenses outside of Washington. Average amount for House members is $48,000 a year; Senators' totals range from $32,000 to $78,000, depending on the distance of member's home base from Washington and number of constituents. Travel portion is based on 26 trips home annually for members and six for staff emmbers.

--An additional free trip to Washington at the start of each session of Congress and a trip home at the end.

--Unlimited free use of nationwide Federal Telecommunications System daily between 5 p.m. and 9 a.m. on weekdays and around the clock on weekends and holidays.

--Liberal retirement benefits under five years' service. Top pension now is $35,680 a year after 32 years, and will go to $46,000 in 1980.

--A $47,000 life-insurance policy for $434 a year.

--Government-subsidized health-insurance plan.

--Chauffeur-driving limousines for three leaders in the House and six in the Senate.

--Free emergency medical care by Capital Hill physicians and free drugs if prescribed by Capitol physicians.

--Free swimming pools, symns, steam rooms, masseures and physiotherapy.

----Free plants and flowers.

--Free Haircuts at Capitol barbershops; reduced rates at Capitol beauty shops for female members.

--Reduced-rate meals without sales taxes.

--Low rates for TV and radio services in Capitol studios.

--Free help on speeches and answering constituent inquiries from the research service of the Library of Congress.

--A package of special items, such as prescriptions to the Congressional Record, calendars, maps and pamphlets to give to constituents, valued at more than $10,000.

It is no wonder that Congress' high living is raising the hackles of taxpayers more than ever...and for the first time, Congress will spend more than a billion dollars in one year on itself. This is three times the amount spent only 10 years ago.

WASHINGTON— R. Heath Larry, vice chairman of United States Steel Corp. and a nationally known spokesman for business and industry, has been elected president of the National Association of Manufacturers by that organization's board of directors.

Chairman of the NAM since December 1976, Mr. Larry will retire from U.S. Steel on August 1, 1977 to devote full time to his duties with NAM. He will be succeeded at that time as NAM chairman by Harry K. Wells, chairman and president of McCormick & Company, Hunt Valley, Md.

Labor Specialist

Mr. Larry has served in his present position at U.S. Steel since 1969. A native of Huntingdon, Pa., and a graduate of Grove City College (B..A.) and the University of Pittsburgh (J.D.), he joined the company's former National Tube Company as an attorney in 1938. He became a specialist in labor relations with U.S. Steel 10 years later and since then has pioneered in some of industry's most constructive collective bargaining relationships.

A recognized authority on international trade, national health problems, labor management relationships and industrial productivity, Mr. Larry has been a frequent presidential appointee to various national commissions dealing with such matters.

Long-Range Plan

As NAM chairman, Mr. Larry has supervised development of a long-range action plan under which the association will expand its role as an aggressive champion of the business community.

As part of this effort, the NAM president-designate sees NAM's major goal in the years ahead as mobilizing the business community-its employees, stockholders and other business "constituents"-and encourageing its deep involvement in the political process and the formulation of sound solutions to public problems.

Saving the Lousewort:

Congress to spend millions saving tiny fish, flowers, balking big power projects

WASHINGTON— For years now environmentalists, pisciculturists and botanists, defending unto the death the fate of allegedly endangered madtom catfish, tiny snail darters and an ugly breed of Maine wildflower, the rare snapdragon called the Furbish lousewort, have delayed or prevented construction of dams, nuclear and non-nuclear power plants. These could provide our energy-jittery nation with over 200 billion kilowatt hours of electricity annually.

The defenders of underwater life are so uptight over threats to the swarming little things that a leader of the Clamshell Alliance thrust two dead, palm-sized fish in the face of the Environmental Protection Agency administrator Douglas Costle. He had just approved resumption of construction of the famed Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant the other day. He had just sanctioned the cooling system which ejects hot water into the Atlantic.

It's a fierce battle on all fronts -- including President Carter's decision to slow down or wipe out the Clinch River nuclear breeder reactor plant project in Oak Ridge, Tenn. It provides jobs for some 4,393 skilled men and women, including construction workers in 22 states at an $88 million annual payroll.

Before I get back to the expensive snail darter and madtom catfish (which is complicating an Army Corps of Engineers Obion and Forked Deer River rechanneling project in Tennessee) there is a brief protagonist's description of the Clinch River project value well worth recording here:

"The fastbreeder represents an extraordinary energy resource in its own right. It can use, as a major component of its fuel loading, depleted uranium -- the tails left over from the processing of conventional nuclear fuels and from uour weapons program.

"We already have on hand . . . more than 250,000 tons of this depleted uranium, which is useless except as the 'fertile' material in a breeder. So used, these 230,000 tons of uranium tails could generate electricity for more than 500 years at the present U.S. total level of consumption . . . these tails have an energy content greater than all the presently recoverable U.S. coal reserves."

Every dam and every traditional hydroelectric as well as nuclear plant and project killed or stalled by courts acting on environmentalists' legal maneuversmeans the killing of thousands of jobs. Also the deprivation of vital electric power. Therefore, hundreds of local unions everywhere are now petitioning President Carter to cease opposing Clinch River. The breeder project has become the symbolic battlefront.

Meanwhile, for example, the $116 million Tellico Dam some 20 miles west of Knoxville, Tenn., can't be finished, though it is almost 90 per cent complete. The court did rule that its completion would kill off a three-inch perch called the "snail darter." It's found only in the Little Tennessee River. The madtom catfish crisis is unsettling to the Defense Department.

The ugly little Furbish lousewort is found along Maine's St. John River bank. Because it's reportedly an endangered species which would be wiped out by the back waters of the projected $1.3 billion Dickey-Lincoln hydro-electric project, the vast tystem is being held up, though it would produce 1.2 billion kilowatt hours of electric power if and when completed. And nothing nuclear about it.

So the U.S. House of Representatives rode to the rescue. With Solomonic wisdom, usually an endangered species in our Congress, the Appropriations Committee sent along a measure providing $9 million to meet as many piscicultural and botanical crises as possible. The fund will go for the relocating of the fish and thre transplanting of the flowers.

Recently scuba divers were sent down to see just how the snail darters are thriving -- and if they can be shifted to new watery homes. The divers found this not an easy assignment. There are at least 10,000 snail darters. They are difficult to tell apart from minnows.

And they could be moved to some other river unaffected by the completion of the Tellico dam.

Now the madtom catfish is under study. As for the Furbish lousewort, it is ugly, serves no purpose and wouldn't set civilization back one bit if it were wiped out. But the name of the game is to challenge those who see the seriousness of a world petroleum crisis.

Some environmentalists' legal actions have delayed power plant construction for as long a seven to 10 years. It's certainly their privilege to act and react. But they show little flexibility. Construction union leaders tell me the hard-hat rank and file are treated with an "elitist snobbery" by the impassioned environmentalists though this is the laboring man and woman's bread, not hobby.

The construction workers also complain that the environmentalists just don't follow the consumer protection rules which they (the ecologists) so fervently champion. For example, they operate under such names as Conservation Law Foundation of New England, the National Resources Defense Council and the Center for Law and Social Policy.

There's an official government ring to these titles -- "centers" and "foundations for law." Actually these are usually small organizations heavily funded (albeit privately). And rarely do they explain in the small print who funds them. Who elects their officials? How are they chosen? And what of the salaries and expenses? The records always ar there somewhere. But unlike the supermarket can label, the documentation isn't out front.

So now the Congress must spend at least $9 million on snail darters and louseworts and relocate them instead of pouring the money into housing for humans now living in those inner citie which the environmentalists deplore so loudly and often.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Black Caucus Protest Racial Slur

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Rep. John Ashbrook, R.-Ohio, has an unruly tongue, which has now gotten him into a backstage brouhaha with his black colleagues.

We started the imbroglio by reporting that Ashbrook, in a nasty reference to the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., had growled that time and money "should not be wasted investigating the murder of some nigger."

The remark allegedly was made in front of congressmen who got together over chicken dinner to discuss the House assassination investigation. Witnesses clearly recall hearing Ashbrook make the controversial statement. One witness, Richard Sprague, former chief counsel of the House Assassinations Committee, confirmed the incident from his records. But Ashbrook denied he had said anything of the sort.

The congressman from Johnstown, Ohio, is an amiable fellow who, nevertheless, has a reputation for shooting from the hip. He has also voted down the line against the civil rights measures that the venerated Dr. King died for. On May 13, therefore, we reported what the witnesses had overheard.

The Congressional Black Caucus immediately fired off a private letter to House Republican Leader John Rhodes asking him to investigate the alleged racial slur. "We submit this request to you," wrote Rep. Parren Mitchell, D.-Md., the caucus chairman, "hoping it will prevent the Republican Members of the House from being tarred with the brush of racism."

Rhodes responded two weeks later. "I have talked personally," he reported, "with Rep. John Ashbrook ... (who) categorically denies having said those words, or any words similar to them." Rhodes said he had also talked with other congressmen who attended the dinner. None of them, he wrote, had "any recollection of having heard Ashbrook utter those words."

This doesn't square with our own investigation of the incident. It should also be noted that the unwritten rules of the House forbid one member from disparaging another in public. The black caucus chairman, therefore, was not satisfied with Rhodes' response.

With the concurrence of the caucus, Mitchell fired off a second letter demanding a public disavowal from Ashbrook. The black leader called for Ashbrook to "seize the earliest opportunity to set forth his views on race relations, his attitudes towards minorities and his public and private relations with blacks ... in an appropriate public forum."

Ashbrook told us he would ignore Mitchell's challenge. "Arrogance of that type doesn't need to be answered," he snorted. Then, in another exhibition of hip shooting, he suggested that Mitchell should come forward and reveal his own record.

"Many people would like to know," shot Ashbrook, "whether Mitchell is in favor of perversions of civil rights." By perversions, Ashbrook said he meant "reverse discrimination and affirmative action (which causes) the lowering of standards under the guise of civil rights."

Patronage Tree: Every time the congressional payroll is shaken, a number of cronies fall out like overripe fruit from a tree.

The House Commission on Administrative Review has just shaken the patronage tree on Capitol Hill. It was as loaded as usual with overripe political favorites, who got their jobs because of whom they know rather than what they know.

The commission has just drafted a report on congressional patronage, which hasn't yet been released to the public. Its conclusion: the hoary practice of handing out jobs to political pals is widespread on Capitol Hill, costing the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The latest available statistics, compiled last November, list 330 food, cloakroom, custodial and folding room employees in the House Doorkeeper's office. All but 12 were patronage jobs.

Most other Capitol Hill payrolls, ranging from the Sergeant at Arms to the Office of the Clerk, were overloaded with patronage jobs. Every last one of the 28 House-employed guides, for example, were patronage appointees. About 20 per cent of the 616 Capitol police were selected not for their law enforcement skills but for their political pull.

The commission also reviewed the little luxuries that go with election to Congress. There are sauna baths, for example, to help congressmen recover from the rigors of legislating. For those interested in a little physical exertion between sessions, there are also paddleball courts, a swimming pool and a weight room. For a token $15 annual fee, a member of the House can partake of this exclusive recreation, attended by handymen and therapists who draw their pay from the taxpayers.

Congressmen growing green about the gills can also call upon the Capitol Hill medical staff for free advice. If they need X-rays, they can get their bones photographed absolutely gratis. Most medicines are sold to congressmen at cost.

The taxpayers also subsidize ink-splattered printing facilities, radio-television studios that rival anything on the Paramount lot and "official" photographers to record such historic events as a high-school group from home calling on their congressman.

The U.S. State Department has received reports that about 50 Cuban military advisers, and possibly several hundred troops, have been or are being sent to Ethiopia. They can't be sure, since Ethiopia's new Soviet- backed regime is in the process of kicking out just about every American in the country.

The Communists, of course, are the world's best stabilizers. They have stabilized Eastern Europe, whether the people there want to be stabilized or not. They have stabilized Vietnam. They would dearly love to stabilize everybody.

It is indeed noteworthy that little Cuba, which for its size has stabilized more people than any nation on earth — usually by putting them in prison — has enough energy left over to help out the cause in Africa.

INCREASE RATES AFTER, NOT BEFORE

The Missouri Public Service Commission is considering allowing, and has in one case, already, utility companies to raise their rates sufficiently to take care of costs of construction that is under way or planned.

If that is approved for all utilities, the consumer will be providing the companies with construction funds, at no interest. The average business does not raise its charges because of costs it anticipates, it borrows money to handle costs until those costs are exactly known.

The utilities should have to do the same.

It's Your Taxes That Congress Is Spending

The 95th Congress has been in business for about two months, yet it has done much to feed the public's impression that legislators are more interested in high living at taxpayer's expense than attending to their duties.

On top of their new salary of $57,500 a year, members of Congress can take advantage of a long list of "perks" that cost taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars per congressman yearly:

--Increasing allowances tor paying staff, based on number of constituents. For senators, the top allowance of $902,301 is up from $450,766 in 1969. For House staffs, top allowance is $255,144, up from $141,733 in 1969.

--Rent-free offices at the Capitol and in home districts with liberal furniture allowances.

--Sizable expense allowances for travel, telephones, telegrams, newsletters, field-office costs and official expenses outside of Washington. Average amount for House members is $48,000 a year; Senators' totals range from $32,000 to $78,000, depending on the distance of member's home base from Washington and number of constituents. Travel portion is based on 26 trips home annually for members and six for staff emmbers.

--An additional free trip to Washington at the start of each session of Congress and a trip home at the end.

--Unlimited free use of nationwide Federal Telecommunications System daily between 5 p.m. and 9 a.m. on weekdays and around the clock on weekends and holidays.

--Liberal retirement benefits under five years' service. Top pension now is $35,680 a year after 32 years, and will go to $46,000 in 1980.

--A $47,000 life-insurance policy for $434 a year.

--Government-subsidized health-insurance plan.

--Chauffeur-driving limousines for three leaders in the House and six in the Senate.

--Free emergency medical care by Capital Hill physicians and free drugs if prescribed by Capitol physicians.

--Free swimming pools, symns, steam rooms, masseures and physiotherapy.

----Free plants and flowers.

--Free Haircuts at Capitol barbershops; reduced rates at Capitol beauty shops for female members.

--Reduced-rate meals without sales taxes.

--Low rates for TV and radio services in Capitol studios.

--Free help on speeches and answering constituent inquiries from the research service of the Library of Congress.

--A package of special items, such as prescriptions to the Congressional Record, calendars, maps and pamphlets to give to constituents, valued at more than $10,000.

It is no wonder that Congress' high living is raising the hackles of taxpayers more than ever...and for the first time, Congress will spend more than a billion dollars in one year on itself. This is three times the amount spent only 10 years ago.

WASHINGTON— R. Heath Larry, vice chairman of United States Steel Corp. and a nationally known spokesman for business and industry, has been elected president of the National Association of Manufacturers by that organization's board of directors.

Chairman of the NAM since December 1976, Mr. Larry will retire from U.S. Steel on August 1, 1977 to devote full time to his duties with NAM. He will be succeeded at that time as NAM chairman by Harry K. Wells, chairman and president of McCormick & Company, Hunt Valley, Md.

Labor Specialist

Mr. Larry has served in his present position at U.S. Steel since 1969. A native of Huntingdon, Pa., and a graduate of Grove City College (B..A.) and the University of Pittsburgh (J.D.), he joined the company's former National Tube Company as an attorney in 1938. He bacame a specialist in labor relations with U.S. Steel 10 years later and since then has pioneered in some of industry's most constructive collective bargaining relationships.

A recognized authority on international trade, national health problems, labor management relationships and industrial productivity, Mr. Larry has been a frequent presidential appointee to various national commissions dealing with such matters.

Long-Range Plan

As NAM chairman, Mr. Larry has supervised development of a long-range action plan under which the association will expand its role as an aggressive champion of the business community.

As part of this effort, the NAM president-designate sees NAM's major goal in the years ahead as mobilizing the business community-its employees, stockholders and other business "constituents"-and encourageing its deep involvement in the political process and the formulation of sound solutions to public problems.

WAR OVER PARKING

WASHINGTON— Futurists are now predicting that the world will end with neither a whimper nor a bang. It will end when enough people can't find a parking place. In Washington they are voting stern parking measures for their streets, which could change the American way of life as we know it.

In the past, commuters from the suburbs as well as Maryland and Virginia have driven into the city and have parked their cars all day long in front of someone's house, and then at the end of the day driven them back to the suburbs where they pay their taxes, and, according to all the real estate ads, live the good life.

But a court ruling has changed all this and now motorized incursions from the hinerlands will be prohibited. It could turn Washington into another Beirut.

When you take a person's parking spot away from him, you take away the dearest thing in his life. We are not really talking about parking--but the territorial imperative. Man has always been willing to go to war over real estate, and there is no land as precious to an American as a place where he can leave his car.

To quote Winston Churchill, "The storm clouds are gathering." In suburban shopping center malls militant parking leaders are inciting suburbanites to prepare for battle. City-dwellers are calling for armored tow trucks to repell an invasion. Hardliners from both sides are rallying the mobs.

A spokesman for the city-dwellers said, "We've had it up to here with the suburbanites' cars. They come in the winter and make potholes which we city-dwellers have to pay to repair. They come in the summertime and pollute our air. They make obscene remarks to our women, and think they can buy anything with their money. Well, now the courts have decided they can't park all day, wherever they want to. If they want to live in the suburbs let them stay here."

A leader of the out-of-town Free Parking Movement clenched his fist.

"The Declaration of Independence provides for the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," he said.

"But it doesn't say anything about parking," I told him.

"What do you think the 'pursuit of happiness' translates into?" he said bitterly. "There is no greater pursuit of it than trying to find a place to put your car. Americans spend more time looking for an empty parking space than they do watching television. Ninety percent of all their leisure time is wasted searching for a parking spot. We will not be told where we can and cannot park. If they lay a finger on the bumper of just one of our loved ones, it will mean civil war."

The voices of moderation are trying to find a peaceful solution to the problem. One that has been offered is that the West Bank of the Potomac be given to the suburbanites for all-day parking. They would have free access to Washington, providing they come over on foot. The Bethesda Heights would be offered for alternate day parking, and the Dulles Airport strip would be declared a neutral zone for tourists.

But both the city-swellers and the suburbanites are reluctant to accept the agreement.

The militant suburbanites, backed by their militant politicians, have declared that "Parking is not negotiable. Those parking spaces have been ours for 50 years and we will not give them up."

The equally militant city people are prepared to fight back. As one of their leaders said, "The first gas-guzzling commuter car that parks illegally on one of our streets will find a parking meter shoved up its tailpipe where it belongs."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Saving the Lousewort:

Congress to spend millions saving tiny fish, flowers, balking big power projects

WASHINGTON— For years now environmentalists, pisciculturists and botanists, defending unto the death the fate of allegedly endangered madtom catfish, tiny snail darters and an ugly breed of Maine wildflower, the rare snapdragon called the Furbish lousewort, have delayed or prevented construction of dams, nuclear and non-nuclear power plants. These could provide our energy-jittery nation with over 200 billion kilowatt hours of electricity annually.

The defenders of underwater life are so uptight over threats to the swarming little things that a leader of the Clamshell Alliance thrust two dead, palm-sized fish in the face of the Environmental Protection Agency administrator Douglas Costle. He had just approved resumption of construction of the famed Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant the other day. He had just sanctioned the cooling system which ejects hot water into the Atlantic.

It's a fierce battle on all fronts -- including President Carter's decision to slow down or wipe out the Clinch River nuclear breeder reactor plant project in Oak Ridge, Tenn. It provides jobs for some 4,393 skilled men and women, including construction workers in 22 states at an $88 million annual payroll.

Before I get back to the expensive snail darter and madtom catfish (which is complicating an Army Corps of Engineers Obion and Forked Deer River rechanneling project in Tennessee) there is a brief protagonist's description of the Clinch River project value well worth recording here:

"The fastbreeder represents an extraordinary energy resource in its own right. It can use, as a major component of its fuel loading, depleted uranium -- the tails left over from the processing of conventional nuclear fuels and from uour weapons program.

"We already have on hand . . . more than 250,000 tons of this depleted uranium, which is useless except as the 'fertile' material in a breeder. So used, these 250,000 tons of uranium tails could generate electricity for more than 500 years at the present U.S. total level of consumption . . . these tails have an energy content greater than all the presently recoverable U.S. coal reserves."

Every dam and every traditional hydroelectric as well as nuclear plant and project killed or stalled by courts acting on environmentalists' legal maneuversmeans the killing of thousands of jobs. Also the deprivation of vital electric power. Therefore, hundreds of local unions everywhere are now petitioning President Carter to cease opposing Clinch River. The breeder project has become the symbolic battlefront.

Meanwhile, for example, the $116 million Tellico Dam some 20 miles west of Knoxville, Tenn., can't be finished, though it is almost 90 per cent complete. The court did rule that its completion would kill off a three-inch perch called the "snail darter." It's found only in the Little Tennessee River. The madtom catfish crisis is unsettling to the Defense Department.

The ugly little Furbish lousewort is found along Maine's St. John River bank. Because it's reportedly an endangered species which would be wiped out by the back waters of the projected $1.3 billion Dickey-Lincoln hydro-electric project, the vast tystem is being held up, though it would produce 1.2 billion kilowatt hours of electric power if and when completed. And nothing nuclear about it.

So the U.S. House of Representatives rode to the rescue. With Solomonic wisdom, usually an endangered species in our Congress, the Appropriations Committee sent along a measure providing $9 million to meet as many piscicultural and botanical crises as possible. The fund will go for the relocating of the fish and thre transplanting of the flowers.

Recently scuba divers were sent down to see just how the snail darters are thriving -- and if they can be shifted to new watery homes. The divers found this not an easy assignment. There are at least 10,000 snail darters. They are difficult to tell apart from minnows.

And they could be moved to some other river unaffected by the completion of the Tellico dam.

Now the madtom catfish is under study. As for the Furbish lousewort, it is ugly, serves no purpose and wouldn't set civilization back one bit if it were wiped out. But the name of the game is to challenge those who see the seriousness of a world petroleum crisis.

Some environmentalists' legal actions have delayed power plant construction for as long a seven to 10 years. It's certainly their privilege to act and react. But they show little flexibility. Construction union leaders tell me the hard-hat rank and file are treated with an "elitist snobbery" by the impassioned environmentalists though this is the laboring man and woman's bread, not hobby.

The construction workers also complain that the environmentalists just don't follow the consumer protection rules which they (the ecologists) so fervently champion. For example, they operate under such names as Conservation Law Foundation of New England, the National Resources Defense Council and the Center for Law and Social Policy.

There's an official government ring to these titles -- "centers" and "foundations for law." Actually these are usually small organizations heavily funded (albeit privately). And rarely do they explain in the small print who funds them. Who elects their officials? How are they chosen? And what of the salaries and expenses? The records always ar there somewhere. But unlike the supermarket can label, the documentation isn't out front.

So now the Congress must spend at least $9 million on snail darters and louseworts and relocate them instead of pouring the money into housing for humans now living in those inner citie which the environmentalists deplore so loudly and often.

Black Caucus Protest Racial Slur

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Rep. John Ashbrook, R.-Ohio, has an unruly tongue, which has now gotten him into a backstage brouhaha with his black colleagues.

We started the imbroglio by reporting that Ashbrook, in a nasty reference to the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., had growled that time and money "should not be wasted investigating the murder of some nigger."

The remark allegedly was made in front of congressmen who got together over chicken dinner to discuss the House assassination investigation. Witnesses clearly recall hearing Ashbrook make the controversial statement. One witness, Richard Sprague, former chief counsel of the House Assassinations Committee, confirmed the incident from his records. But Ashbrook denied he had said anything of the sort.

The congressman from Johnstown, Ohio, is an amiable fellow who, nevertheless, has a reputation for shooting from the hip. He has also voted down the line against the civil rights measures that the venerated Dr. King died for. On May 13, therefore, we reported what the witnesses had overheard.

The Congressional Black Caucus immediately fired off a private letter to House Republican Leader John Rhodes asking him to investigate the alleged racial slur. "We submit this request to you," wrote Rep. Parren Mitchell, D.-Md., the caucus chairman, "hoping it will prevent the Republican Members of the House from being tarred with the brush of racism."

Rhodes responded two weeks later. "I have talked personally," he reported, "with Rep. John Ashbrook ... (who) categorically denies having said those words, or any words similar to them." Rhodes said he had also talked with other congressmen who attended the dinner. None of them, he wrote, had "any recollection of having heard Ashbrook utter those words."

This doesn't square with our own investigation of the incident. It should also be noted that the unwritten rules of the House forbid one member from disparaging another in public. The black caucus chairman, therefore, was not satisfied with Rhodes' response.

With the concurrence of the caucus, Mitchell fired off a second letter demanding a public disavowal from Ashbrook. The black leader called for Ashbrook to "seize the earliest opportunity to set forth his views on race relations, his attitudes towards minorities and his public and private relations with blacks ... in an appropriate public forum."

Ashbrook told us he would ignore Mitchell's challenge. "Arrogance of that type doesn't need to be answered," he snorted. Then, in another exhibition of hip shooting, he suggested that Mitchell should come forward and reveal his own record.

"Many people would like to know," shot Ashbrook, "whether Mitchell is in favor of perversions of civil rights." By perversions, Ashbrook said he meant "reverse discrimination and affirmative action (which causes) the lowering of standards under the guise of civil rights."

Patronage Tree: Every time the congressional payroll is shaken, a number of cronies fall out like overripe fruit from a tree.

The House Commission on Administrative Review has just shaken the patronage tree on Capitol Hill. It was as loaded as usual with overripe political favorites, who got their jobs because of whom they know rather than what they know.

The commission has just drafted a report on congressional patronage, which hasn't yet been released to the public. Its conclusion: the hoary practice of handing out jobs to political pals is widespread on Capitol Hill, costing the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The latest available statistics, compiled last November, list 330 food, cloakroom, custodial and folding room employees in the House Doorkeeper's office. All but 12 were patronage jobs.

Most other Capitol Hill payrolls, ranging from the Sergeant at Arms to the Office of the Clerk, were overloaded with patronage jobs. Every last one of the 28 House-employed guides, for example, were patronage appointees. About 20 per cent of the 616 Capitol police were selected not for their law enforcement skills but for their political pull.

The commission also reviewed the little luxuries that go with election to Congress. There are sauna baths, for example, to help congressmen recover from the rigors of legislating. For those interested in a little physical exertion between sessions, there are also paddleball courts, a swimming pool and a weight room. For a token $15 annual fee, a member of the House can partake of this exclusive recreation, attended by handymen and therapists who draw their pay from the taxpayers.

Congressmen growing green about the gills can also call upon the Capitol Hill medical staff for free advice. If they need X-rays, they can get their bones photographed absolutely gratis. Most medicines are sold to congressmen at cost.

The taxpayers also subsidize ink-splattered printing facilities, radio-television studios that rival anything on the Paramount lot and "official" photographers to record such historic events as a high-school group from home calling on their congressman.

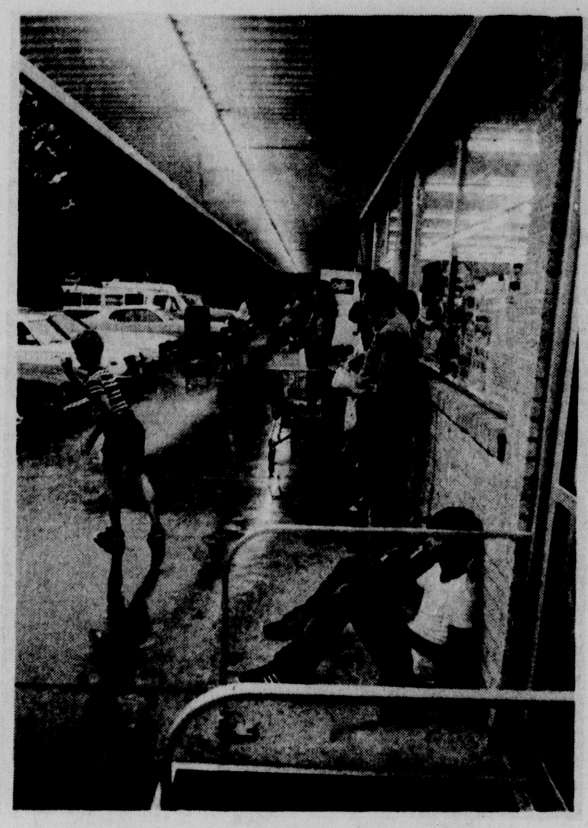
Missouri ginning costs up $5.41 for growers last year

The average charge for ginning and wrapping a 480 pound net weight bale of cotton in Missouri was $37.73 during the 1976-77 season. This is a $5.41 per bale increase from the previous season. The average charge in the U.S. varied from $25.94 in Alabama to $37.73 in Missouri. The average per bale charge for ginning and wrapping in the United States was $32.87 during the 1976-77 season, an increase of 74 cents over the previous season.

The amount of machine-picked seed cotton needed to make a 400 pound net weight bale averaged 1508 pounds in Missouri, up from the 1491 pounds in the previous season. Total running bales ginned in the state were 161,000 bales compared with 189,000 bales in the 1975-76 season.

Average receiving charges made by warehousemen in Missouri were $1.20 per bale, unchanged from the previous year. The average monthly storage charge increased 15 cents a bale to $1.15. Compression charges averaged $4.00 per bale for Universal density, an increase of 25 cents per bale. Compression charges averaged $3.92 per bale for the United States.

Primary data was collected and preliminary computations made by the Cotton Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, with the cooperation of ginners and warehousemen. Data was compiled by the Commodity Economics Division, Economic Research Service, U.S.D.A.



The heavy showers Thursday afternoon caught many by surprise. Rather than risk a soaking, many chose to wait under a protective canopy and amuse themselves as best they could, waiting for the downpour to ease.

Cyst nematode on rampage in Bootheel soybean fields

THOMAS A. BROWN, JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

In checking problem soybean fields with farmers recently, we have found that the soybean cyst nematode is on the rampage again. Make no mistake about it, this pest is really hitting Stoddard County farmers in the pocketbook. According to the recent issue of the Missouri Farm Facts publication which is published by the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, Stoddard County farmers produced an average soybean yield of 19.5 bushels per acre last year. Now, this is ample evidence that we have some serious problems standing in the way of our producing the kind of soybean yields that we should produce. Of course, one of the primary problems along this line is cyst namatode.

Nematocides, or chemicals used to control nematodes, will effectively control cyst nematode, and a number of area farmers are using them. Judging from the number of cases of nematode that we have seen or that have otherwise been reported to us during the past week or so, it would seem that many other farmers could be using them to a good advantage. Results of research conducted throughout this area by Dr. Charles Baldwin, Plant Pathologist at the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville, from 1970 through 1976 showed that DBCP (Fumazone or Nemagon) applied at the rate of three quarts of commercial product per acre increased bean yields over eight bushels per acre. Local farmers who have used this chemical have also reported simular results. Now, when you consider the fact that a yield increase of two bushels per acre will more than pay the cost of this treatment, this becomes a profitable practice. DBCP has produced the best nematode control results of all the nematocides that Dr. Baldwin has tested in his research trials. This chemical is normally knifed into the soil during either the bedding or planting operation. It is especially recommended for use in fields known to be infested with Race 4 cyst nematode. It is also effective against Race 3 nematode; however, nematode resistant varieties can be successfully produced without the protection of a nematocide in fields where only Race 3 nematode is a problem. Whether a field is infested with Race 3 or Race 4 nematode can ge determined from a soil sample from the field in question.

Race 3-resistant soybean varieties commonly grown in this area include Forrest, Mack, and Pickett 71. Contrary to some opinions, these varieties perform favorable when compared to other varieties commonly produced in the area as is indicated by yield results of soybean variety trials conducted in Stoddard County during the period, 1974-76 inclusive. Commonly grown varieties and the per-acre yield prodeced by each are as follows: Forrest-41.3; Mack-36.5; Pickett-32.9; Cutler 71-31.9; York-31.6; Tracy-30.8; Hill-30.6; Mitchell-30.2; Dare-30.0; and Essex-27.9. Incidentally, Centennial, a new Race 3-resistant variety of about Pickett 71 maturity which was released to certified seed growers this year, produced 37.1 bushels per acre compared to yields of 39.8 produced by Forrest, 35.9 bushels produced by Mack, and 32.5 bushels produced by Pickett 71 in the two-year period 1975-76. We do not have a Race 4 nematode resistant variety available at present. Good progress in the development of such varieties is being reported by research agronomists, so hopefully, we will have a variety that is resistant to Race 4 nematode in the not-too-distant future.

Cyst nematode losses could be reduced tremendously by the use of nematode resistant varieties and nematocides. Farmers who aren't using them would do well to consider using them in the future if they have nematode problems.

Scott County cotton off to a good start

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area Agronomy Specialist

The cotton crop in Scott County and area is off to the best start in many years. Bob Matthews told me the other day it was the best start he has seen. A few fields came up late and fields are uneven in height. However, most of the cotton started squaring about the 1st week in June. This means we should have blooms in most fields by July 4.

The squaring rate has risen pretty rapidly the past two weeks. The hot days, warm nights, have helped. Cotton is definitely a dry weather crop.

It normally takes 20 to 25 days from first square set to white bloom. It takes another 20 to 25 days from first boll to full grown boll or from bloom to open boll requires about 50 to 65 days. This means cotton that started blooming July 4th should be ready to pick about September 14.

More days are required from bloom to open boll in Scott County because of cooler temperatures. The most effective fruiting time is from June 20 to August 1. Blooms after August 25 will generally not make cotton in Scott county. This means our cotton crop must be set on the plant by August 1, or shortly after. Most of our cotton is 30 days ahead of the 1976 crop at this time. I believe all fields will be squaring before July 1.

Even though the crop is developing rapidly, everything possible should be done to keep it developing on schedule. Use no herbicides over-the-top whatever you do. If layby herbicides are needed, direct them as recommended. Cultivate shallow and lay the crop by soon as possible. Feeder roots are cross the middles by now, and deep cultivation prunes roots and allows disease organisms an entrance into the plant.

I have noticed a few fields with yellow, stunted cotton. After closer observation, these were found to be deficient in nitrogen. A low pH was also found in most cases. Bacterial activity was reduced and organic nitrogen release was very slow.

The question being asked by farmers is, "Should they apply more nitrogen now?" If you have already applied as much as 40 pounds of actual N per acre, I recommend you apply no more this year. If you feel your cotton is N deeficient, I suggest you take a plant sample and have it analyzed for available nitrogen. Several years of research work shows that nitrogen applied after July 1 decreases yield more often than increasing it. Nitrogen applied now would no doubt help the cotton grow faste., green it up, and make it look better.

Scout fields for plantbugs, bollworms, bollweevils, and spider mites. These are your four biggest potential insect problems in Scott County.

Solar baiting for wireworms shown

Wireworms infest three-fourths of Missouri's counties and reduce corn yields by injuring seeds and small plants. "A wireworm detection program is needed because regulations no longer permit routine application of persistent pesticides like aldrin, heptachlor and chlordane," said Armon Keaster, a University of Missouri-Columbia entomologist.

Keaster and Rodney Ward, another UMC entomologist, are directing research to determine distribution, life history, host range and the behavior of wireworms of economic importance to corn in the Midwest. The entomologists also are looking into the imact of soil and cultural practices on the wireworm.

"To detect wireworms prior to planting, take a handful of untreated corn and wheat seed and bury it four to six inches in the ground. Then mound about four inches of dirt over the bait. Coat the mound with coal dust, powdered charcoal or black plastic. Then cover all this with a sheet of clear plastic. We mark the area with a flag so we can find it two or three weeks later," explained Keaster and Ward.

"Then we dig up the bait and sort through it for wireworms. If we find one or more per bait, that's enough to warrant application of a pesticide at planting," Keaster said.

Two wireworms per bait indicate 12,500 wireworms an acre -- enough to wipe out a stand of corn if conditions are right, he said.

Solar baiting lets farmers check for insects earlier than conventional baiting in late March and early April, before spring planting. The dark coal or charcoal dust and plastic encourage heat conduction and increase soil temperature in the bait area by 10 degrees.

"That's enough to get the seed germinating, and wireworms are attracted," Ward said.

Ward and Keaster recommend two baits for every 10 acres in areas where farmers have had previous wireworm injury. In suspected areas, they recommend two baits for every four acres.

A few fields came up late and fields are uneven in height. However, most of the cotton started squaring about the 1st week in June. This means we should have blooms in most fields by July 4.

The squaring rate has risen pretty rapidly the past two weeks. The hot days, warm nights, have helped. Cotton is definitely a dry weather crop.

It normally takes 20 to 25 days from first square set to white bloom. It takes another 20 to 25 days from first boll to full grown boll or from bloom to open boll requires about 50 to 65 days. This means cotton that started blooming July 4th should be ready to pick about September 14.

More days are required from bloom to open boll in Scott County because of cooler temperatures. The most effective fruiting time is from June 20 to August 1. Blooms after August 25 will generally not make cotton in Scott county. This means our cotton crop must be set on the plant by August 1, or shortly after. Most of our cotton is 30 days ahead of the 1976 crop at this time. I believe all fields will be squaring before July 1.

Even though the crop is developing rapidly, everything possible should be done to keep it developing on schedule. Use no herbicides over-the-top whatever you do. If layby herbicides are needed, direct them as recommended. Cultivate shallow and lay the crop by soon as possible. Feeder roots are cross the middles by now, and deep cultivation prunes roots and allows disease organisms an entrance into the plant.

I have noticed a few fields with yellow, stunted cotton. After closer observation, these were found to be deficient in nitrogen. A low pH was also found in most cases. Bacterial activity was reduced and organic nitrogen release was very slow.

The question being asked by farmers is, "Should they apply more nitrogen now?" If you have already applied as much as 40 pounds of actual N per acre, I recommend you apply no more this year. If you feel your cotton is N deeficient, I suggest you take a plant sample and have it analyzed for available nitrogen. Several years of research work shows that nitrogen applied after July 1 decreases yield more often than increasing it. Nitrogen applied now would no doubt help the cotton grow faste., green it up, and make it look better.

Scout fields for plantbugs, bollworms, bollweevils, and spider mites. These are your four biggest potential insect problems in Scott County.

Solar baiting for wireworms shown

Wireworms infest three-fourths of Missouri's counties and reduce corn yields by injuring seeds and small plants. "A wireworm detection program is needed because regulations no longer permit routine application of persistent pesticides like aldrin, heptachlor and chlordane," said Armon Keaster, a University of Missouri-Columbia entomologist.

Keaster and Rodney Ward, another UMC entomologist, are directing research to determine distribution, life history, host range and the behavior of wireworms of economic importance to corn in the Midwest. The entomologists also are looking into the imact of soil and cultural practices on the wireworm.

"To detect wireworms prior to planting, take a handful of untreated corn and wheat seed and bury it four to six inches in the ground. Then mound about four inches of dirt over the bait. Coat the mound with coal dust, powdered charcoal or black plastic. Then cover all this with a sheet of clear plastic. We mark the area with a flag so we can find it two or three weeks later," explained Keaster and Ward.

"Then we dig up the bait and sort through it for wireworms. If we find one or more per bait, that's enough to warrant application of a pesticide at planting," Keaster said.

Two wireworms per bait indicate 12,500 wireworms an acre -- enough to wipe out a stand of corn if conditions are right, he said.

Solar baiting lets farmers check for insects earlier than conventional baiting in late March and early April, before spring planting. The dark coal or charcoal dust and plastic encourage heat conduction and increase soil temperature in the bait area by 10 degrees.

"That's enough to get the seed germinating, and wireworms are attracted," Ward said.

Ward and Keaster recommend two baits for every 10 acres in areas where farmers have had previous wireworm injury. In suspected areas, they recommend two baits for every four acres.

Over 850 boys, 68 different troops, from this area will be taking part this summer in a camping program offered by the Southeast Missouri Council of the Boys Scouts of America at Camp Lewallen located in Silva.

The week-long camping experience gives the scout a chance to practice many of the education activities that are a part of the scouting program.

Camp Lewallen opened for its first camping season in 1938 when a small portion of land was donated by Mr. and Mrs. L. Lewallen. The camp is located on the St. Francis River, 35 miles north of Poplar Bluff.

In 1939, the camp opened for a full season with a "big week" averaging 30 to 40 boys. Presently, the camp has 12 camping sites, 560 acres of land and will average 115 to 120 scouts, 33 staff members and four to five Counselors in Training.

A staff member must be no younger than 16 years old and a CIT must be at least 14.

The largest number of scouts ever in Camp Lewallen at one time was the first camping week in 1972 when a record of 225 boys were in camp, forcing the scouts to eat in two shifts in the small rugged dining hall.

Organized camping, such as Camp Lewallen, gives a boy the "adventure feeling" of new camping skills, being able to make their own decisions, and special program events all with the "traditional" boy-man relationships. The boys with their scoutmaster live in the same camp site area.

Some of the skills available to a scout include, archery, swimming ecology, rifle, boating, canoeing and traditional scout craft skills.

The special programs consist of a two-day supervised canoe trip down the St. Francis River, a Mount Logan trip, Rebel Cave Hike, scout master shoot-out, conservation officer visits, Order of the Arrow Ceremony and camp wide events. Order of the Arrow ceremony consists of honor camping groups of which a scout may become a member.

The opening day of camp gives one a most exciting feeling, especially for the young scouts.

At the check-in site, the troop together picks out its unit, will carry in their gear of sleeping bags, clothing, etc. into their assigned units. Then with the help of staff members, the boys and their scoutmasters will tour camp to check out the facilities and other troop sites that will be available to them next year. The next stop is the health lodge where each scout is given a quick check up by the camp resident nurse. This will help all camp staff members to be alerted of any medical problems a scout may have and also to check the scouts for any open sores before allowing them to go swimming in the camp pool.

The pool check is held among all scouts to check their abilities in swimming. The scouts are then given a buddy tag marked so that the staff will be aware of what end of the pool a particular scout is allowed to swim in.

Then its "chow time" and chapel before the first day ends.

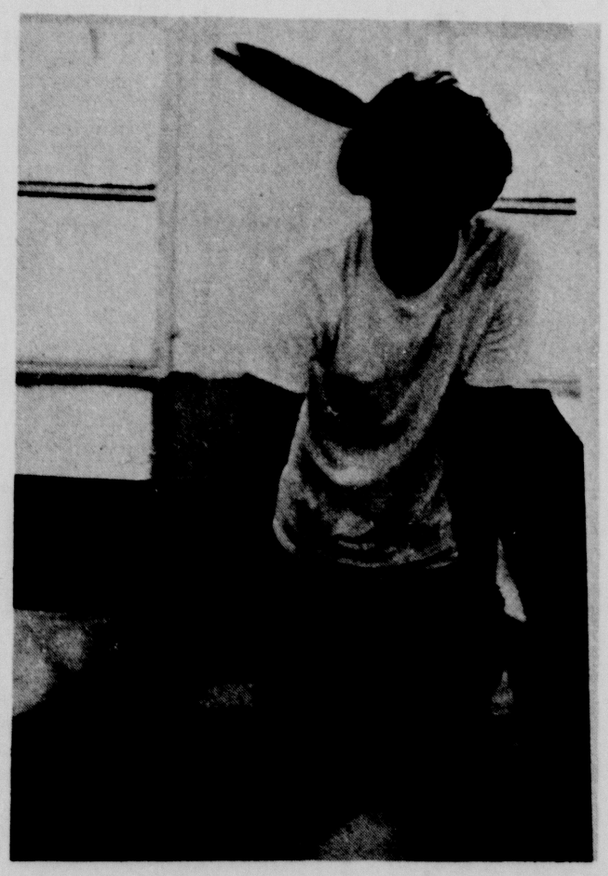
The scouts may eat three meals a day in a small dining hall. The camp has two cooks, one dining hall assistant and three dining hall staff members who work hard in preparing meals for all in attendance. Scouts may cook their own meals in their units if they wish.

Wednesday nights, are cook's night out, this means that each unit has to cook out their night meal. The meal is called a foil dinner or turtle. It is prepared by the boys and consist of a ground beef pattie, onions, carrots, potatoes, hamburger buns, apple and a drink.

The average cost last year to feed the camp for the summer was approximately $14,000. Camp Lewallen is financed from the $30 per-boy camping fee. The fee is the lowest camping fee in the North Central Region of the Boys Scouts of America which consists of 10 states and parts of two others, according to Jim Otten of Dexter, this year's camp director.

This year the camp is host for international Scout, Stephen Lea, 27, of Birmingham, England, who will also serve as a camp staff member. Lea, himself, is a scoutmaster in England.

For what the boy feels and what camp is all about, I'm sure the picures will help tell the story.



Clean up time

Even clean-up is part of camp life. Rick Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wright of Sikeston, cleans up his troops table after lunch in the camp's dining hall. (Daily Standard photo)

Dear Ann Landers

Letter from a canine

Dear Ann Landers: I couldn't help but notice a letter to you from a fellow canine as I was rummaging through a neighbor's garage. I'd like him to know there are worse fates than being tied up in the backyard.

The irresponsible creep I belong to insists I'm a "free spirit" and should have the run of the neighborhood. What he doesn't know is that a dog who is on the loose has a rough time. he must contend with cars, kids and bigger dogs -- in that order. Cars are our No. 1 enemy because they kill so many "free spirits." I got hit once and my owner said it was "a good lesson." Lessons are hard to remember when you are being chased.

Kids are next because they often tease. This bothers me, so naturally I snap back. Then the parents and neighbors get into the act. They shout obscenities and throw things. Sometimes they use slingshots and B-B guns.

Other dogs on the loose are a terrible problem -- especially when they travel in packs. If they catch you in their territory they will tear you to pieces.

The security of my own backyard would be a welcome relief. Loneliness is a big step up from the harassment of the street.

When will people learn that dogs need people? I saw a bumper sticker the other day that summed it all up: "Leashed Is Loved. Unleashed Is Unwanted." -- One of The Unwanted.

Dear One: You certainly write well for a dog -- better than a lot of humans. Thank you for letting us known how it is for man's best friend when he's allowed to run loose.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night was one of those rare occasions when my husband and I were invited to a really swell dinner party. The alcohol flowed like there was no tomorrow. Clyde is one of those pople who can't say "No, thank you," when he gets around booze. He has to drink until he's dead drunk.

When I finally got him to go home I took the car keys and luckily he didn't put up a fight. Getting out of the car he fell on the garage floor. When I tried to help him up he said, "Don't you dare," so I just stood there and waited for him to struggle to his feet. It took about five minutes. Then he put his hat back on his head and fell again. He had his good clothes on, which he ruined. I was disgusted, but said nothing.

Clyde has been an alcoholic for many years. I've begged him to get outside help but he insists he doesn't need it. Now I'm thinking of divorce. After 37 years, should I? – Fed Up

Dear FEd: Try Al-Anon. (It's in the phone book.) If, after six months of meetings, you are still "Fed Up" and Clyde has made no effort to dry up, make your decision based on whether your life would be better with him or without him IN other words, realign your priorities. Put yourself first for a change.

CONFIDENTIAL to Sunbonnet Sue In Sandusky: You've got bees in your sunbonnet, Susie. When a man pays a woman's rent, he has a right to expect "special favors." My advice is, find a cheaper apartment.

Open mind

Can you guard against senility

Dear Sirs:

I will be 86 in October. I live n a retirement village. We each have our own apartment and take care of ourselves.

I see elderly people who become senile and not able to care for themselves. Is there anything one can do to guard against senility? I have children, who are lovely to me, but I wouldn't want to be a burden to them.

I welcome any advice regarding growing old and how to cope with it.

AGING

Begin early in life

Dear Aging:

I, too, live in a retirement apartment and see those who show sings of senility. Age is only a part of the problem. A person of 80 may be more alert mentally than one of 60. What is the difference? Were they equally interested in life and active participants in their community when younger? To avoid growing senile, begin early in life. Research shows that those who keep active, physically and mentally, age less rapidly than those who are content to just sit.

Some say they can no longer take part in activities planned for them in their community. Many communities offer special courses for the older adult. There are always some things each person can do. The important thing is to get out among people, to keep abreast of the times and take part in stimulating conversation (conversation is not a recital of one's ills.)

Keeping physically fit through exercise and proper nutrition is also important. If you can't go outside for a walk, walk in the halls or do simple exercises in your apartment. Do you eat sensibly and well: Information is available for an adequate diet for older persons.

It is important that people adjust to their present conditions and continue or develop those activities, which make for a rich, happy and healthy life at any age.

Keep going! Keep doing!

Katherine Clarke
Retired Elementary School Principal
Resident- Heritage House
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Aging:

Senility is generally thought to be a weakness of the mind that accompanies old age. However, many people reach a very ripe old age and never succumb to "senility." Some encounter the symptoms much earlier in life than others. Actually, the effects of what is called senility has a casual relationship tohardening of the arteries, which in turn is caused by deposits within the walls of the arteries, thus hindering adequate supply of blood to the brain. Many medical professionals link this condition to the selection of foods consumed, especially those foods high in cholesterol.

You would do well to consult a physician with expertise in this area in orderto find out through appropriate tests if you should be controlling the intake of certain foods. Physical exercise in proportion to your ability and health is highly recommended. It is also beneficial and important for you to maintain an interest in people.

It seems you are unduly worried about something that doesn't exist presently, namely, being a burden to your children. Try not preoccupying yourself with the future, but rathr with the present. Finally, don't associate aging with disability because this isn't necessarily so.

Grief

By Rev. Dr.
Arthur C. Fulbright

"Now when Jesus heard this, he withdrew from these in a boat to a lonely place apart."
St. Matthew 14:13 (R.S.V.)

Have you ever wondered if Jesus Christ experienced grief and heartache as you do? And, if so, how he reacted?

Read St. Matthew chapter fourteen (14) and you will see how Jesus reacted when he heard the sad news that his cousin, John the Baptist - whom he loved and admired so much, had been beheaded. Hearing this news, Jesus immediately withdrew in a boat to a lonely place apart. Now isn't that human? Isn't that the first reaction to grief and heartbreak? Withdrawal.

Withdrawal is not necessarily self-pity. It is our instinctive response to sorrow. But we must not stay in withdrawal too long. Jesus didn't. Because if you grieve too long you lose your sense of perspective and balance.

When our Lord caught sight of the multitude working its way to his place of seclusion, instead of turning inward with self-pity, the Bible says, "He had compassion on them, and healed their sick."

Jesus found solace in turning from himself to others.

Can you guard against senility

Dear Sirs:

I will be 86 in October. I live n a retirement village. We each have our own apartment and take care of ourselves.

I see elderly people who become senile and not able to care for themselves. Is there anything one can do to guard against senility? I have children, who are lovely to me, but I wouldn't want to be a burden to them.

I welcome any advice regarding growing old and how to cope with it.

AGING

Begin early in life

Dear Aging:

I, too, live in a retirement apartment and see those who show sings of senility. Age is only a part of the problem. A person of 80 may be more alert mentally than one of 60. What is the difference? Were they equally interested in life and active participants in their community when younger? To avoid growing senile, begin early in life. Research shows that those who keep active, physically and mentally, age less rapidly than those who are content to just sit.

Some say they can no longer take part in activities planned for them in their community. Many communities offer special courses for the older adult. There are always some things each person can do. The important thing is to get out among people, to keep abreast of the times and take part in stimulating conversation (conversation is not a recital of one's ills.)

Keeping physically fit through exercise and proper nutrition is also important. If you can't go outside for a walk, walk in the halls or do simple exercises in your apartment. Do you eat sensibly and well: Information is available for an adequate diet for older persons.

It is important that people adjust to their present conditions and continue or develop those activities, which make for a rich, happy and healthy life at any age.

Keep going! Keep doing!

Dear Aging:

Senility is generally thought to be a weakness of the mind that accompanies old age. However, many people reach a very ripe old age and never succumb to "senility." Some encounter the symptoms much earlier in life than others. Actually, the effects of what is called senility has a casual relationship tohardening of the arteries, which in turn is caused by deposits within the walls of the arteries, thus hindering adequate supply of blood to the brain. Many medical professionals link this condition to the selection of foods consumed, especially those foods high in cholesterol.

You would do well to consult a physician with expertise in this area in orderto find out through appropriate tests if you should be controlling the intake of certain foods. Physical exercise in proportion to your ability and health is highly recommended. It is also beneficial and important for you to maintain an interest in people.

It seems you are unduly worried about something that doesn't exist presently, namely, being a burden to your children. Try not preoccupying yourself with the future, but rathr with the present. Finally, don't associate aging with disability because this isn't necessarily so.

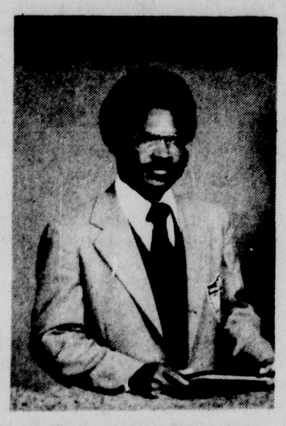
Ask The Pastor

How far can you go on a date?

By Rev. E. Pembleton



Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: Many of my schoolmates go to weekend parties and smoke pot, use the needle, and engage in sex. They don't invite me anymore because I will not join them in such activities. Just how far can a young person go in these things and still be a Christian? — Justine.

Dear Justine: I am happy that you are no longer invited to parties such as you describe. You are being saved from having to pay for dangerous indulgences which affect both the present and the afterlife.

Those youngsters on pot and free sex are ruining their health and future usefulness, to say nothing of their moral worth and their souls. Pot is a needless and dangerous poison, and the results of promiscuous sex can be even worse, bringing upon its victims and their possible offspring poor health, often blindness, insanity, and many kinds of physical deformities. Christians can engage in neither of these without serious consequences. Please read Deuteronomy 29:18 (margin); 1 Corinthians 5:9-13; 3:16,17; Revelation 21:7,8.

To all persons so engaged the Lord Jesus would say, "Go, and sin no more," "lest a worse thing come unto thee" (John 8:11; 5:14).

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I am sixteen and in love with a very nice boy of seventeen. We think that we would like to quit school and get married, but both of our parents object to this very much. We don't know why they can't see that we are not children anymore and that we know what we are doing. We could probably finish our education at night school sometime if we ever felt that we wanted to do this. Lots of young people our ages are getting married. Is it so wrong if we want to? - Linda.

Dear Linda: There is nothing wrong with marrige or with two young people looking forward to marriage. There is, however, grave danger in entering into this relationship too early, before your own tastes and ideals have matured. It is undoubtedly true that many of your friends are getting married, but it may also be true that these friends are making tragic mistakes for which they will pay later in broken homes and unhappy lives.

Recent studies of school-age marriages found 50 per cent of the young brides said that if they had it to do all over again, they would have finished high school first before they got married. Early marriage may well be part of the cause of the growing divorce rate and the shocking number of broken homes.

Remember that when you enter into marriage, you are entering into an experience for LIFE, not for a week or a month or a year to see if it will work!

A Christian does not take the easy attitude of so many moderns that if a marriage does not work out happily one can always get tout of it and marry someone else. You should therefore use caution, making sure that you know that you are doing the right thing. Teen-age marriage is DANGEROUS. By all means wait.

Send your questions to Pastor Pembleton, P.O. Box 65, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

What's the law?

The case of the vampire

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

The gulf in Marty's game of golf became readily apparent one Sunday morning when, somehow or other, he managed to hit another golfer on the head with his ball while teeing off. What was particularly puzzling about the incident was that the other golfer was standing 20 feet behind him at the time Marty's ball layed him low.

In reporting the unusual accident, a magazine described Marty as being an astute businessman who played golf more for business reasons than pleasure. And, in attempting to explain how the impossible accident could have occurred, the magazine implied that Marty was possibly meditating over a potential business deal and thus distracted at the time he wacked his ball.

"It suggested that I was a vampire," complained Marty in court. "It suggested that I played golf merely to suck business out of other players and that I was, therefore, crassly materialistic."

"All that was indicated," responded the publisher, "was that maybe Marty's mind was more on business than on golf when he hit his ball. That's not defamation, that's lack of concentration."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit business-minded Marty to collect for defamation of charactrer?

This is how the judge ruled: NO. The judge held that business golf is neither shocking nor shameful and is a commonplace practice among businessmen. It does not connote that such a golfer is overly materialistic, concluded the judge, nor does it impart a defamatory meaning.

(Based upon a 1970 United States Court of Appeals Decision)

Household Hints

Toss some seedless green grapes into a tossed green salad for great flavor and texture.

Syrup-preserved ginger is expensive but a jar lasts a long time. It's delightful added to fresh fruit compotes. It also does wonders for canned pears; heat the pears in a little of their syrup with some grated lemon rind and top with slivers of the ginger.

Deviled ham mixed with grated cheddar cheese and a little chili sauce makes a good filling for toasted sandwiches. If you cut the sandwiches in quarters you can serve them for party fare.

Alan Arkin will star in "The Defection of Simas Kudirka," a dramatic special about the Lithuanian seaman who made a daring, but abortive, attempt for freedom by leaping from a Russian ship to the deck of an American Coast Guard vessel, off the coast of Massachusetts, during a U.S.- U.S.S.R. joint conference on fishing rights and territorial waters in 1970.

The two-hour special will be filmed on location in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, for broadcast during the 1977-78 season on the CBS Television Network.

Starring will be Richard Jordan, as Edward Devon, Commander of the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Vigilant; Donald Pleasence, as Popov, Captain of the Russian vessel; and Shirley Knight, as Kudirka's wife, Genna.

Gerald Isenberg is the executive producer, and Gerald Abrams and Richard Briggs are the producers of the Jozak Company Production for Paramount Television. David Lowell Rich will direct from a script by Bruce Feldman and Sandor Stern.

Simas Kudirka's attempted defection was an impulsive, unpremeditated action, spurred by his desire for freedom. However, under pressure, the Coast Guard officers were forced to return Kudirka to the Russian ship. He was taken back to his homeland and condemned to imprisonment in Siberia. The two-hour drama focuses on the events leading to the attempted defection, the military decision regarding the Coast Guard officers involved in the human tragedy, and the unceasing efforts of an American couple who pursued State Department officials until, via political channels, Kudirka was released from prison and brought to the United States, where he lives today.

The multi-talented Alan Arkin was nominated for an Oscar for his first feature-film appearance, as a Russian submarine officer in "The Russians Are Coming,' The Russians Are Coming." He followed that, two years later, with another nomination for his moving portrayal of a deaf mute in "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter."

Some of his other film credits include roles in "Hearts of the West," "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "Little Murders," "Catch-22," and "The Seven Per-Cent Solution." he has directed films and plays, and has appeared on the stage and on television, most recently in the award-winning dramatic special "To America" on the Network.

Richard Jordan starred in NBC's "Captains and the Kings" and has appeared in such feature films as "The Friends of Eddie Coyle" and "Rooster Cogburn."

Donald Pleasence has had a career encompassing virtually everything from the Bristol Old Vic to Broadway, where his credits include "The Man in the Glass Booth." He will also be seen in "Goldenrod," a special broadcast June 1 on the Network.

His feature- film credits include "The Great Escape," "Cul de Sac," "You Only Live Twice" and "The Night of the Generals."

Shirley Knight, a gifted stage and screen actress, was nominated for an Oscar for best supporting actress in both "Sweet Bird of Youth" and "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs." Her other films include "The Rain Poeple," "Petulia," and "The Group." On television, she appeared in the critically acclaimed Playhouse 90 presentation, "The Lie," on the Network, and most recently in "21 Hours to Munich." Her most recent Broadway appearance was in "Kennedy's Children," for which she won a tony for best supporting actress.

David Lowell Rich directed the "GE Theater" drama, "The Secret Life of John Chapman" and "Aloha Means Goodbye" on the Network. He also directed many ABC Movie of the Week presentations, including "Death Race," "Satan's School for Girls," "Runaway," and "All My Darling Daughters." Mental Health Affects Work

NEW YORK (AP) — About one third of a person's life is spent working, so it pays to maintain on-the-job mental health, says Dorothy M. Saller, executive director of the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses.

The group's 9,000 members, all registered nurses, daily counsel employes and see firsthand the effect of personal problems on job performance.

Self-examination on the following points might be the key to increasing your own happiness at work, Miss Saller notes.

—If something at the office or factory bothers you, do you ever express your feelings — in a nice way, of course — to your boss? It might be a good idea to do so.

—Have you had a physical checkup during the past year, especially on your blood pressure? It could be the root of what's bothering you.

—Do your on-the-job work habits create stress for you and your coworkers? Every company has behavior and procedural norms that require a certain amount of conformity.

—Do you have the right qualifications and skills for your job? You may be in the wrong field — or "over your head" in your present job.

—What about your personal habits? Are you smoking or drinking too much. Are you overeating?

—Are you a workaholic, with no time to relax? Is your job your only interest in life?

—Are your family, social and sexual relationships in good balance? If not, they can hamper work performance as much as heart or any other disease.

—Are you getting the proper amount of sleep? It's still true: you can't burn the candle at both ends.

—Are you letting personal financial problems nag you without doing anything about them?

—Have you ever discussed your business or personal problems with an expert such as your company doctor or occupational health nurse?

The first Osco Drug Store, located in Rochester, Minn., was found in 1937. Called the Payless store because of its merchandising philosophy, the chain soon grew to six stores in four states. In 1942 the original owner sold the stores to a partnership made up principally of store managers, who renamed the chain Owners Service Company, from which Osco was coined. The low priced, high quality philosophy coupled with autonomous managing has proven a successful formula for Osco which operates 256 stores in 18 states, and still growing.

Prince Valiant

by Hal Foster

Our Story: DESPITE HIS HALF-HEALED WOUNDS, GUNTHER URGES HIS PANTING MOUNT ACROSS THE DESERT, ANGRY THAT VAL AND THE SHEIK SHOULD ATTEMPT A QUEST RIGHTFULLY HIS.

HE RIDES PAST BETHLEHEM WHERE HE FEELS SURE VAL WOULD REST THE HORSES OVERNIGHT. IN THE NEXT VILLAGE HE STOPS, LEAVING ORDERS TO BE AWAKENED BEFORE DAWN.

HE IS FIRST TO ARRIVE IN JERUSALEM... FOR WHAT? JUST BECAUSE HE FEARS VAL HAS SOME KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHURCH RELICS AND WISHES TO GAIN CREDIT FOR THEIR RECOVERY!

HE PURCHASES A BURNOOSE TO COVER HIS ARMOR AND WANDERS ABOUT THE STREETS IN THE HOPE OF MEETING ONE OF THE FUGITIVE CHURCH ROBBERS.

ABOUT MIDDAY HE SEES PRINCE VALIANT, SHEIK ABDUL, MAFAUD AND THEIR GUARDS ARRIVE IN JERUSALEM AND RIDE TOWARD THE SHEIK'S PALACE, BUT HE DOES NOT FOLLOW. THIS IS HIS QUEST AND HE INTENDS TO COMPLETE IT.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: DESPITE HIS HALF-HEALED WOUNDS, GUNTHER URGES HIS PANTING MOUNT ACROSS THE DESERT, ANGRY THAT VAL AND THE SHEIK SHOULD ATTEMPT A QUEST RIGHTFULLY HIS.

HE RIDES PAST BETHLEHEM WHERE HE FEELS SURE VAL WOULD REST THE HORSES OVERNIGHT. IN THE NEXT VILLAGE HE STOPS, LEAVING ORDERS TO BE AWAKENED BEFORE DAWN.

HE IS FIRST TO ARRIVE IN JERUSALEM... FOR WHAT? JUST BECAUSE HE FEARS VAL HAS SOME KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHURCH RELICS AND WISHES TO GAIN CREDIT FOR THEIR RECOVERY!

HE PURCHASES A BURNOOSE TO COVER HIS ARMOR AND WANDERS ABOUT THE STREETS IN THE HOPE OF MEETING ONE OF THE FUGITIVE CHURCH ROBBERS.

PONYTAIL ◇◇ BY LEE HOLLEY

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Our church has a high, peaked interior ceiling. Floodlights mounted near the peak accentuated the spider webs that had accumulated over a period of years. The problem was how to get the spider webs down

We purchased a large, helium-filled balloon and a spool of thin, but strong, nylon fishing line.

We turned the floodlights out because of their intense heat, and attached the nylon line to the balloon.

After the balloon had ascended to the ceiling apex, we were able to maneuver it around by means of the spool end of the line.

The spider webs were quickly and cleanly removed.

Now, that's what I call ingenuity! Sounds like fun besides!

Can I clue you in on something?

I have beamed ceilings in my mountain cabin and this works great on them: Tie a swatch or two of nylon net (or have you ever heard of that?) around the balloon. Leave the cutoff ends of the net on the top of the balloon.

The webs will stick to the net! This net can be removed and washed many times.

And, gee, I sure do love you two.

A STICKY PROBLEM

DEAR HELOISE:

Keep a roll of clear adhesive-backed paper on hand for those odd jobs that tape can't handle.

For instance, a strip of clear adhesive-backed paper will keep a cord snugly against the wall and the kids can't pull appliances or clocks down from shelves.

Patricia

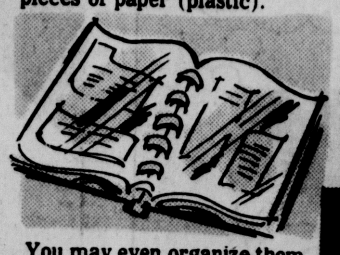
RECIPE ALBUM

DEAR HELOISE:

I am a 12-year-old girl and I thought of an organizing hint.

A lot of women cut out recipes from newspapers and magazines. Like my mother, many women may store their recipes in their cookbooks, etc.

My idea is to buy a photo album and put the recipes between the two transparent pieces of paper (plastic).



You may even organize them anyway you like, such as in alphabetical order.

C.D.

JANICE'S IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

I believe my 4-year-old son has discovered a practical use for junk mail and advertising circulars.

After I check them to be sure I don't want them, they are his to use for "cut-and-pasting," his favorite rainy day activity.

And I no longer pick up my current magazines and find holes in articles because he got there before I did!

Janice Rockmore

TOOTHPASTE TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

My mother is so smart. Here's what I learned from her.

My sister dyed Mom's hair and some dye got on her ears, face and neck.

I'm sure this would be a big help to other women who dye their hair. It really worked for my mom.

Tina and Mom

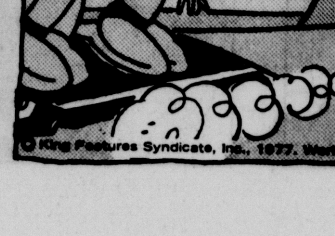
SEWING FABRIC

DEAR HELOISE:

I wish to share something with those who are sewing drapes, coats or any other fabric difficult to handle.

I push my sewing machine against my dining table, extending the cover of the machine over the table.

This allows me to rest the fabric on the table while I sew.



I find this a great help, as the table carries the heavy load of the material as well as making sewing easier.

Betty Sauerlender

Well, Bless Bess! If you aren't the seamstress yet!

Thanks for taking a load off the rest of us seamstresses!

YOU'LL GET A BOOT!

DEAR HELOISE:

Recently, we visited our daughter's family. One gift for our 10-year-old granddaughter was a western outfit for one of those small dolls.

Of course, it included cowboy boots and my granddaughter and I struggled and struggled (I even broke a fingernail) trying to get the boots on the doll.

My smart daughter came by, took the doll to the kitchen and sprayed each foot with one of those new non-stick sprays for pans.

The boots slipped right on! (I never would have thought of that!)

Babe D.

You can bet your boots I never would have, either!

Two heads (in this case three) are better than one any old day. Bless you for letting the rest of our "heads" in on this goody.

SEWING SEQUINS

DEAR HELOISE:

When you are using sequins for various purposes, put them in a small muffin tin.

Each color sequin is put into the separate compartments, making the color selection fast and easy.

I even traveled with this muffin pan in my train case and never spilled a sequin.

Mrs. Grace Blume

SLIP INTO SOFT

DEAR HELOISE:

At the bargain counter, I came across good, greatly reduced pillowcases. They had outlandish patterns and designs on them but the colors were vivid and beautiful, though a bit wild.

I purchased a few and slipped them on our old sofa pillows, and they slip off just as easily for laundering.

Presto! A whole world of color and conversation pieces.

Z.K.

A JUICY STORY

DEAR HELOISE:

Use tongs rather than a fork when turning meat.

Saves the juices.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Fence is missing. 2. Mat is missing. 3. Tail is shorter. 4. Tongue is missing. 5. Sleeve is shorter. 6. Neckline is different.

Hal Kaufman's JUMOR WHIRL®

BULLETIN BOARD

●DON'T ASK! Which dance is performed in the dining room? The menu-et. Which anniversary honors the buffalo? The bison-tennial.

One hundred forty-four.

●Shop Talk! A foreign merchant, anxious to please English-speaking customers, put this sign in his shop: "xSxHxOxRxTxWxExIxGxHxTxSxHx ExRxE." Simply drop x's to read it.

●Breath Taker! Fold down about one-half inch of each end of an ordinary business card. Place card on flat surface. Try to blow it over.

BOTTOM LINE! Ask a friend to shuffle a full 52-card deck. Have him turn up the top card and add sufficient cards in a pile to total 12 (if he turns up a 5, he adds 7 cards, etc.; if he turns up J, Q or K, it counts 10). This is repeated until a few cards are left. These are set aside

Now, without having seen the deal, announce that you will state the total of the bottom cards of the several piles.

Here's how: Count the number of piles, subtract four, multiply by 13, add the number of leftovers. Alakazam! That's the sum of the cards.

Give it a try.

BEACHED BOY? What can you draw to complete the puzzling scene above? To find out, add lines 1 to 2, 3, etc.
